Thread: Multi-Accounter Spotted - "Nerdist" UID = 3211527

al5ina5 - August 2, 2016, 12:45 pm

This user \(Nerdist\) is the same person as this user \(imnerdist\).

Now, al5, how do you know that? Both go by the same "Nerdist" tag

Both own domain <http://www.ActuallyAwesome.com> (which I was scammed with)

"Latest IP's Matching Other Memebbers: 1"

Join date is equal to my scam report post time (he made a new account after seeing my report)

He claims that's his friend, but we all know he's lying. You can read more of his fairytale here. Just a heads up. I'm sure admins can verify this. Deal safely, unlike I did with this user.

More proof!

"imnerdist" Skype username (xceleez) matches the user "Celeez's" Twitter handle...tri-accounter? <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2476908&page=7&highlight=xceleez>

Definitely a multi, he was giving some pretty shitty excuses to all this evidence in this thread: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5357808>

Instead of making a thread, the best thing you can do is PM a staff member, not Omniscient, Staff... Send them the proof and they will look into it more and find out, if not then nothing will be done, if so he'll be banned.

That doesn't always work so a thread isn't the worst idea.

A guy admitted to me that he's a multi, I forwarded it to staff but nothing was done.

Why don't people understand? Just PM <https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=1> and be done with it, no need to make a thread.

Best to be damned sure they are a multi if you are going to PM Omni.

The guy scammed OP on his old account, I think it's fair to make a thread like this so people know not to deal with his current account.

I know that Omniscient is not a fan of me, and I've reported several suspected multis to him. At least one or two weren't multi's and just mistakes. He didn't rep fuck me or close my account for it though. I would just ask a friend in private if you are unsure, kinda pointless to make a thread imo especially when you have sufficient proof.

Thanks to all the replies above. Wasn't aware on who to PM.

I mean why don't people also understand there are other staff members that also ban multi accounters not just Omniscient, He probably get's enough pm's as it is, so pming another staff member is probably the best case...

Making a thread isn't the best idea, but not the worst of course... However.. If nothing was actually done before then there obviously wasn't enough proof to ban him..

Can you direct me to a staff member I can forward this thread to?

Anyone on here: <https://hackforums.net/showstaff.php>

Apart from Omniscient, make sure you provide enough proof that he is a multi account and actions will be taken.
