Thread: [Dervie's Middleman Service | Always Free! \[OPEN FOR SERVICE\]](#)

SIM-82498 - August 3, 2016, 6:43 pm

Hello and welcome to my free middleman service. There's not much to say in terms of introductions as this service that I am offering is straight to the point. If you wish to prevent or at least decrease the risk of a scam occurring, then you're in the right place.

What is a middleman and how does it help prevent me from getting scammed?

A middleman acts as an intermediary between two users who wish to conduct a transaction. The intermediary in this context will be myself (Dervie). Although using a middleman does not guarantee the safety of your transaction (will discuss further later), it does do a great deal in reducing the risk of a user-to-user transaction. An example of how a middleman would work in a transaction: User A wants to buy User B's OG Instagram using Bitcoin

User A does not trust User B, so they both agree to using a Middleman

User A sends the intermediary (Myself) the Bitcoin payment

Once payment has been confirmed, User B will proceed to give User A the account

Once User A has confirmed everything checks out, the Middleman will then release the Bitcoin to User B

I want to use a middleman, but I don't trust you:

That's entirely fine, you're not forced to use me at all. My service is free, and my intentions are pure: to assist users in a trade. If you're interested in using a middleman but don't seem to trust me, refer to this thread by AXiS:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5313623>

How do you operate? What's your process?

A middleman service does not have to be complicated. Once both users of the transaction agrees to using me, simply send me a PM with the following:

Code Who are the users involved?:

What does this transaction consist of?:

What is the main currency being used in this transaction?:

Do you agree to my terms and agreements?:

If I am not busy, I will agree to middlemanning your transaction, otherwise, I will politely deny. I only accept a transaction if I have spare time as it requires a bit of patience (sometimes things go wrong on one end).

How can I contact you?

My only modes of communications are through Private Messaging and Skype. I personally recommend dealing on-site (PM) for the safety of everyone. Dealing on-site allows others to validate proof in the event you get scammed. It also reduces the chance of an imposter significantly. If you still wish to deal on Skype, then ensure that it is me by sending a confirmation PM EVERY SINGLE TIME.

Terms and Agreements: If in the event you wish for me to secure an account for you, then you must provide all necessary steps. Any issues that occur that are out of my reach (i.e a security measure from the website due to a new IP login) then it is not my fault. I will warn you prior to logging in.

I will only hold Bitcoin (and possibly other popular crypto-currencies). I will NEVER hold a PayPal payment.

When dealing with PayPal or a recoverable product (think Social Media accounts), I will not be responsible for these unfortunate actions. However, I will step in and have my input on a Deal Dispute if you wish, simply send me a PM.

In the event that you conduct a Deal Dispute, you are not to mention my name or UID in the title or the body of the post. My role in a Deal Dispute would be to simply provide relevant information and to vouch that the transaction occurred.

I suggest you replace Axis with Minimalist or Regulus. They are 30x more trusted.

The thread I linked to was a thread posted by AXiS where he compiled a list of the middlemen of Hackforums. It wasn't a recommendation solely to AXiS, but it allows users to see the other middlemen available.
