I can enjoy a live adaptation if it is done correctly and follows the anime, but no live adaptation has done/ever will do that.

Agreed. Although at the same time I do feel sorry for the LA producers, as often the anime they might try to recreate takes place in such a complicated environment that its hard to replicate on the screen in a LA format, such as whoever is doing the SAO LA.

I enjoy both live action and animated anime.

I watched a few live action movies made after anime and honestly, I enjoyed them. The best one I watched is Parasyte. The 2 part movie was actually pretty awesome. (too bad it didn't have the epic soundtrack from the anime)

Aura - August 7, 2016, 10:08 am

I don't watch Live Action Anime. No idea why, but it doesn't seems that enjoyable. Most of the universe of the Anime I watch is too "fantastic" to be adapted correctly in a Live Action movie, and I couldn't stand the insane amount of CGI present.

So far, no one even watches live action shows lol. I'd say we represent the industry pretty well by following the 2D > 3D ideology ^^

Professor Pantsu - August 10, 2016, 3:23 pm

I haven't heard of any live action adaptations of anime being good so I never bother watching them.

The Ruroni Kenshin movie wasn't too bad. There are a few gems here and there lol

While 2D trumps 3D sometimes I will watch a live action

Chips Ahoy McCoy - August 12, 2016, 4:45 am

This question depends for me as well. Like, if it's an adaptation for some sort of Slice of Life anime, totally. If it's something "magical" no. I'd rather not.

Happeh - August 12, 2016, 5:54 pm

There's a couple I haven't minded. None have really been as good as the anime but its enjoyable nonetheless.

Made my vote.
