Your configs always work great, thanks a lot :)

Nevermind. I found out.

Thank you for posting this.

Mr.Oug - August 7, 2016, 9:22 am

I think you should lower the Iv value few people have those kind of pokemons in their account. Or atleast wright a warning stating that the pokemons will tranfer if their Iv is lower than 98

EbonCipher - August 7, 2016, 9:22 am

Thank u so much OP!. really appreciate it

DKProdigy - August 7, 2016, 9:23 am

why is it not grabbing/using pokeballs ?? only great/ultra ?

(Aug 7, 2016 09:23 AM)DKProdigy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) why is it not grabbing/using pokeballs ?? only great/ultra ?

Because after botting for awhile, you'll max out on great/ultra and no need for regular balls at that point.

New to this stuff

Shea213 - August 7, 2016, 10:29 am

Hi, can I have a script to keep all above 2100cp, I have Lapras and Arcanine (drag, snorlax, etc) I would like to keep.

Last time I started necrobot, it deleted all my pokemon, heard about you so came here, cheers.

New update!

"This release features automatic Device ID generation

You can now opt to leave the device values static and your device ID will not be the same as everyone elses. If you prefer to use your own device, you can do that as well!

To change the device information in /Config/auth.json to YOUR personal device, you will need android-sdk with adb (and drivers for your phone). Here are the correlating values with the command to run to grab the value off your phone:

"DeviceId": "", // adb.exe shell settings get secure android_id
"AndroidBoardName": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.product.board
"AndroidBootloader": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.boot.bootloader
"DeviceBrand": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.product.brand
"DeviceModel": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.product.model
"DeviceModelIdentifier": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.product.name
"DeviceModelBoot": "qcom",
"HardwareManufacturer": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.product.manufacturer
"HardwareModel": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.product.model
"FirmwareBrand": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.product.name
"FirmwareTags": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.build.tags
"FirmwareType": "", // adb.exe shell getprop ro.build.type
"FirmwareFingerprint": "" // adb.exe shell getprop ro.build.fingerprint "

Christina Perri - August 7, 2016, 10:50 am

I keep getting softbanned but the bot automatically unbans me, i only worry about getting a ban in the near future but the exp rate is insane

You didnt listen to me. You have to first have a config folder where config.json is located. You can replace that file with the one you can download here when you have created your config folder. Also put your login details in auth.json.

Grim - August 7, 2016, 3:09 pm

You're sniping pokemon, so yeah. Catching pokemon gives 2x/4x more exp than pokestops, so it's better for higher exp.

You need to run the bot once for the config file to appear in the config folder.

Otherwise you can just get the one on this thread, put it on a notepad, and save it there manually. You'll also need the auth file if you plan on doing this.

Restart the bot on the RDP.

If that doesn't work, re-install Net framework 4.6.2

That's what I was asking for to the OP. Detailed behavior.

Looking inside the config file, it seems to farm only the stronger Pokémon, skipping most of the crappy ones (since like in the original games, you can only rely on the strongest, unbalanced races)

EDIT: Details has been added to the main post (#1), just check for it.

Enter the folder where you have the program.

Program -> Config-> config.json (Edit file).

Find the line "DefaultLatitude" and add your latitude and longitude just below.

You can get the coordinates you look here (gps - coordinates . net)

Have you all updated your NecroBot to the latest version?

If you are getting the pokestop error just re-open the bot a few times and try again or you may be ip banned.

How come the config transfers my Dragonite? I had a Dragonite on 1700, but then it transferred it ? Only pokemon it has happened to as far as I know.

Because it only keeps Pokemon above 2000 CP, Don't worry you will snipe one in no time.

Do either of these configs net high soft bans or random errors/exceptions?? I've tried them and I was getting soft banned every 5 mins or so.

Unruly, so according to your main post I should be able to create a fresh account, plug in fresh login information, hit start and watch it level up for hours on end?? Is PTC or Google any more reliable then the other? I've been using Mass PTC creator for fresh accounts and I feel they have been causing random errors. Whereas I have my original test account which is a Google account and it has done the best so far overall with using different bots.
