Thread: [HTML CSS and a bit of JQuery navigation \[menu\]](#)

wanbetaaler - August 13, 2016, 12:54 pm

Hi there,

i coded a navigation which i want to generalize on future projects.
its like 90% finished just some touch ups and some effects and i am finished with it i still need a logo for login and a form for it and a search icon for the search bar and when clicked on the logo it will expand to whats there right now.

anyways here are some screenshots and a gif.
tips are great :)

full layout

Looks like it works well! I add some more detail to make it prettier.

Great job!

It's simple, sleek and most importantly it works. Mobile compatibility looks good to. Nice job! Maybe a different font for the nav-bar but I'm sure you've already thought of that.

I really like the clean and simple look it has. Good job, OP.

This looks pretty tasty, I'm not fond on the font you used. Maybe something a bit more metro and sharp?

Other than that great work

Open Sans never failed anyone. Just take a look at the Google Fonts library. Packed with fonts like Roboto to make your site look clean.
