Thread: [\[New Information\] How to avoid all pokemon go ban types \(including the new ones\)](#)

? PROFIT ? - August 14, 2016, 11:27 am

Soft ban

Caused by jumping location.

Unable to spin pokestops/catch pokemon/fight in gyms.

Avoid it by either not jumping locations too quickly or by waiting before jumping there.

A good estimate of how long you should wait is how long it would take to get there by flight.

Can be bypassed by spinning a pokestop 1-50 times.

Capture ban

Caused by capturing more than 1000 pokemon in 23 hours.

Unable to capture pokemon.

After ever hour, if your total pokemon in the last 23 hours is below the ban threshold, you'll be unbanned, If you surpass that threshold, you'll be banned again.

Potential bypass by throwing missing pokeballs 15-30 times.

Pokestop ban

Caused by using more than 2000 pokestops in 23 hours.

Unable to use pokestops.

After ever hour, if your total pokestop uses in the last 23 hours is below the ban threshold, you'll be unbanned, If you surpass that threshold, you'll be banned again.

No public way to bypass.

Temp IP ban

Caused by too many requests from the same IP.

This ban prevents any MapObjects from being returned. (unable to find pokestops error)

Will last anywhere from 10 minutes to a few hours depending on severity.

Can be bypassed by using proxies.

Login Error ban

Possibly caused by login into multiple accounts with the same DeviceId.

Potential bypass when you change DeviceId. edit: this doesn't seem to work, but you're free to give it a try

Not much is known about this type of ban.

NEW INFO: I have noticed some of my accounts getting banned after changing the password without first logging into the account.

Any information you could add would be greatly appreciated.

Buzzle - August 14, 2016, 11:58 am

Taking a look at the login error "ban" right now after news of it disappearing from accounts.

invisionthis - August 14, 2016, 12:06 pm

So has anyone figured out how to fix the login error ban?

It can possibly be fixed by changing your DeviceID

So if you have another phone use it for example? Or do you mean logging in with a bot of some sort and changing the device id there ?

Either with a bot or with nox or rooted android or whatever, s long as you can change it

It's still unknown because it's so random. Even legit players are getting that message. Honestly, best guess would be corrupted data. It's hard to say they're bans when you can bot 1k accounts at once with the same config, yet only a small portion are "banned."

Pokestop and pokemon bans were easy to figure out. Those just took us time and some debugging values.

OP, it's a 23 hour timespan. You can bot again on the same hour you started on the previous day.

The pokestop ban has some type of dynamic value to it. Some accounts last less than 2k and some more. My highest was 2.2k.

The new temp ban information was my findings w/ help from people in my discord server. Those are accurate apart from being 1 hour off on ban times. Everything else is 100% accurate.

This is a picture from someone else's bots (3rd was a manual stop)

Someone in my discord had a theory that the pokestop bans were based on total items collected. It's too late right now (8:30am), but I can test it when I wake up.

Another potential would be exp, since it's 50 or 100.

Was it not confirmed that it was the amount of pokestops you have spun (updated every hour to see if you're within the limit)

I was the one that found that, but it was never an exact number. Pokemon is exactly 1000 no matter what. Pokestops seems to be random, but always around 2k. It's weird to have an exact number for pokemon, but randomized for pokestops. There's some other value that's being calculated in it.

1k within a period of 23-24 hours?

Alright, I'm not able to test out the pokestops theory, but if it isn't checked within a few days I'll be able to pitch in.

What's the fix if one of the bots out of 50, left of for days, logs in fine, catches pokestops fine but still doesn't /can't catch the Pokemon.

What it means is if you have botted your accounts and change the password it is likely to get a ban, happened to multiple of my accounts until i realized that was causing it

Well the soft ban is kind of unavoidable. I've been botting at 10km/hr and I step get soft banned from time to time. I really don't think there's any way of actually avoiding any type of ban. They're gonna get you eventually lol.

Yeah bans are kinda like a sweep it's not good but they decide to throw a few ban waves every here and there haha.

If so i have literally 0 softbans. I just went through the log did ctrl+f and search ban/soft/possible and got nothing.

Harry Manback - August 15, 2016, 4:24 pm

Welp, after surviving the first ban wave on my main account and not botting for a week or so, I finally got banned this morning. I had literally logged in at 10 am because I saw people saying ban wave, and I thought "ok cool" since I was able to log in and had no soft ban or anything.

I go to my doc appointment and come back to the data error message, RIP 240 Snorlax candy.

From what I know, that method does not work anymore. I believe that you will probably have to wait the softban out in order for the account to be used again.

I believe that you will probably have to wait the softban out in order for the account to be used again. It works perfectly fine for a ban caused by location. All old bans + bypasses work. People are just getting bans mixed up.

These are my test results for the pokestop exp theory.

Account 1 = 109.1k

Account 2 = 109.2k

Account 3 = 109.25k

Account 4 = 109.3k

Someone's currently testing a brand new account (I'll do one as well), as I'm not 100% sure those were at 0 pokestops. But just from that data, it appears to be a 109.3k exp limit rather than ~2k pokestops.

It'll take roughly 6 hours to test the new accounts.

I also tested out throw types. They do not affect pokemon temp bans.

Hmm I keep getting the login error when however my nickname (from the deleted account) is unavailable does this mean the account is just banned?
