check robots.txt and also google site:website.com inurl:/

if there's a bunch of results in one category you can just add -keyword to the beginning of the search query

Robots.txt just disallows things from being seen by web crawlers that obey that file so if there's a disallow:/wp-admin and you do a google search site:domain.com inurl:/wp-admin even though that directory does exist it won't show up in the search results.

so if you see something that looks like it could be a login portal then copy what's included beside disallow beside the url in your address bar

Try the SQLi Dumper admin page finder & use their .txt of /admin_page directories.

If you want to download it, just google:

Code SQLi Dumper hostr

<https://hostr.co/fxiuTJAK1oxg>

That's the one I use.

Check for HF admin pages on this website and you'll laugh ;) Plenty of fake pages so skids would endlessly try to find a weakness in all of these honeypots Quick copy & paste from the tool. Those that are colored in yellow mean that they were not found. If they're green, that means that the admin page was found. Pretty sure they aren't honeypots :)

My bad, should've translated the page before making such a conclusion ^^
