Thread: Possible re-brand - Null

Nobility - August 16, 2016, 4:19 pm

Sales have been up for roughly 6 months now and well people are still low ballin. So I'm considering the thought of a re-brand or maybe continuing on Null (not sure my top 6 actives are currently behind bars or under investigation). Any who's thoughts? Of course any replies won't be taken 110% seriously.

Quick headsup to my Null crew: As you know I stopped using Skype a year ago, message me on HF if you're still active.

Pew ? - August 16, 2016, 4:20 pm

I've always liked the concept of Null. It was one of the only groups, aside from Archive, that strived to better the forum. At the end of the day it's your call. I have a few ideas. If you're interested pm me.

Compulsive - August 16, 2016, 4:22 pm

I wasn't quite sure what Null was, but if you guys make some mentoring, you could really see some more results.

If I remember correctly that's how they operated. They offered teaching within the SF. I believe you applied for a certain skill you wanted to learn.

minimalist - August 16, 2016, 4:23 pm

If you're going to rebrand, do something that isn't against site policy so that you can keep the on-site activity high. Your choice though, obviously.

That was something Vinnie implemented, in theory when the project started it sounded great. But as time progressed it seemed as if it was a pipe dream, basically all those members who ended up paying for those "classes" during Vinnie's era pretty much got scammed. I still let those guys in Null just because I feel partially responsible being the owner, even though I never got to see the money. Main reason that program went down was the ongoing investigations on Vinnie, otherwise it might've been a success.

You should honestly try to bring that back before rebranding, if you even do so. I'm sure you'll be able to find capable mentors all around HF. However, instead of buyins maybe you should just do it for free as a way to spike activity. If it does bring lots of activity feel free to do with it as you wish.

Do you truly have the time on your hands to dedicate to running Null?

It might sound like a good idea, but I have a feeling Null would just go inactive again after a month. Re-branding into an entirely new group/concept, or just a re-vamping of the existent group?

HairyHarry - August 16, 2016, 4:32 pm

I'm still looking for a group, where I can teach other members. It's the only reason why I would join a group.

Feel free to drop me a PM, if you want more info.

1. Yeah generally got time on my hands at the beginning of the school year, after Winter I usually run with the harder Uni classes.

3. I suppose that question is basically Community vs. Null members - I'm not sure how many of my guys(Null) are even around.

I'd honestly like to see something new from a group instead of constant rehashes, a re-branded Null might just do that for me. Good luck if you decide to go with it ?.

The issue with this being, is there anyone still around skilled enough (that's not already in it), that will be active and a positive influence.

If we brought in what Th3Pony was doing in his second group: SecurityHub, and having people teach each other, that'd be pretty sick.

Doxicity - August 16, 2016, 4:39 pm

If you end up deciding to reboot the group, definitely keep the userbar and name.
They're one of the only groups left to remind me of the old days.

Faith Connors - August 16, 2016, 4:41 pm

It would be great to have some kind of cyber-security focused group if you don't decide to keep UB or name, I mean we have like 3 gaming groups now and 3-4 for marketing/"money-making" so it would be nice to spice things up. After all this is HackForums, not ebookForums

You should stay with Null, get some new recruits/teachers and start it up again.

If you plan on rebranding then do whatever you want.

I was reading about all the old groups from when I first joined.

Illuminati is back (lol.) so why not bring back another group or something?

?hoenix - August 16, 2016, 5:38 pm

Null was the first group that I joined, and I loved the exclusivity that the group had.

I would be all for a continuation of Null Consolidated.

Mr. Robot - August 16, 2016, 5:48 pm

I personally think Null could do something such as have 1 representing party for each topic/subject regarding exploits/hacking. They would each advertise their sales under the group, when a user is learning the trade they are accepted in to read what's in the subforum and learn + contribute and once they have finished their "training" with the "mentor" they would then be voted in or removed.

That could work as a way to "buy-in" to the group and also learn/teach users and have quality members representing the group.

Each mentor can only take on 1 paying user at a time.

-Just my 2 cents. Would encourage group activity and quality even if it's not for the entirety of HF.

Not really lowballing you, groups were never actually worth $10,000

You'd think with the thousands of dollars in buyins you got from the program you wouldn't mind selling at a bit of a loss, unless you never saw any of that profit which would blow.

Meow - August 19, 2016, 11:47 am

Why don't you continue with Null student program and all that stuff you did b4 when Vinnie was around? You could lower buy-in (tutoring) price and continue with the group the way it is, without re-brand.

Recruit new tutors (if most of them are behind bars/inactive) and continue with 'old' Null?

The only issue with that is being able to find seriously dedicated teachers who are willing to put their time and professional knowledge towards an HF group without any pay. It's part of the reason why The Alliance fell inactive towards the end of its life cycle, and part of the reason why courses inside of Null had such a high cost.

Finding members that "really want to learn about stuff" is just as hard when you have to sieve through the members that just want the notoriety that comes with the userbar.

For sure.

But I'm sure there would be a few members that would be willing to help, if they won't do it for free, I suppose they could a cheaper buy-in price of like $50-$100, opposed to the $500 they used to charge. Not a lot of members will pay the $500 now, like they used to.

I'm sure there is a bunch of members that would love the opportunity to expand their knowledge into the "Hacking/security" fields.

But I'm sure there would be a few members that would be willing to help, if they won't do it for free, I suppose they could a cheaper buy-in price of like $50-$100, opposed to the $500 they used to charge. Not a lot of members will pay the $500 now, like they used to.

I have no doubt that there are plenty of people that are willing to teach classes for free, but the problem is getting them to maintain that activity for prolonged periods of time. After about three or four lessons both the teachers and the students tend to fall into inactivity if there's no money involved.

Of course there are, but there are other issues with students that aren't so obvious when recruiting. Like I said before, there are the members that just want a userbar, but there are also members who only have a passing interest in what's being taught. They like the idea of learning, but don't like the idea of having to sacrifice time and putting forth an effort to achieve it. Then there are the members who have an honest and true desire to learn but are hindered by things out of their own control, like time constraints and off-forum commitments. So that leaves a small pool of members who have a sincere desire to learn along with the available time/resources to dedicate to learning, but are still liable to fall to one of the other camps I mentioned at any time. The pool of possible students suddenly becomes very small, even smaller when you consider the amount of them that can afford to make payments of any kind towards online mentoring.

It wasn't really a buy-in. It was a student package offered by Null that had a variety of courses hosted by its members.

I remember when Prism had that student thing. Was it $500?

All you jizzing about null relax lmao

SIM-1166170 - August 22, 2016, 8:30 am have you heard back from that Aussie chick or srpp wizard?? If they don't help, or any of the originals don't help I doubt this will last long as you'll more than likely just go away again, but what do I know.

Good luck?

LOL 2 birds with 1 stone i love it

prolly the only decent post u've ever made on hf

Tommy - August 22, 2016, 8:45 am good luck with this. hopefully it turns out well I guess..

For Pc hardware how to build computers what are good specs etc help other members make one. The idea of having a PC hardware SF within Null is good and something I'm interested in. As for having an additional SF I'm unsure what I'm looking for, rather no proper idea has popped up.

Mind you Null is slowly getting back on it's feet, after nearly a year of inactivity on HF.

1st step: Get proper communications going again & yes I'm cool with certain groups using my TS.

hello how do i join group i heard null was the best one

please respond

problems.x - September 2, 2016, 2:56 am make a business group please, that'd be fucking awesome. Not like eternal and them LQ groups, make one exclusive to people who actually have a true passion and interest for marketing, and things business related.

"make one exclusive to people who actually have a true passion and interest for marketing"

Every owner that ever had marketing group said that, lmao

Some SRPP-type discussions would be pretty nice and easy to do, although that kinda hinges on the group's memberbase.

All null mebers are so "spooky". Recently joined, few posts and a null UB.

I would join and possibly even pay to join if I knew that I will be learning hacking in an effective way. I'll have my head up for more upcoming null news.

As interesting as that is, it's extremely hard to keep something like that active. It requires people to think, and not a lot of people like to do that.
