Thread: Spot the member with a custom group userbar

_wind - August 17, 2016, 11:00 pm

So I was looking through the "Who's Online" section of HF and saw something interesting:

Regular members (non-upgraded or in custom group) have their names displayed in #efefef.

Members that have set a custom group user bar as their default, however, display the color #ffffff.

Here's a challenge. I've used a script to change everyone's names in the "Who's Online" to be a default member (#efefef). There is one member has a custom group user bar (#ffffff).

Your mission is to distinguish which member has the custom group user bar. Good luck!

Did you just get lucky and happen to look when no ubers or leets were online? Or did you edit them out? Either way nice going but I have no clue who it is.

Bruh if I stare at a name for too long it seems like it's brighter than the others ... I think im going retarded

Lor?d - August 17, 2016, 11:12 pm

Canada definitely looks brighter than the rest to me.

Yeah, I used a script. Way more efficient than editing every single one your self lmao. Here it is for those interested:

Code $('span[class^="group"]').removeAttr('class').addClass('group2');

Parker is in Synergy, it gets pretty easy if you know the members or have seen them around.

V?rt - August 17, 2016, 11:16 pm

It's for sure 210% Canada

Zexo - August 17, 2016, 11:17 pm

I guess I am I could most likely tell others but i'm lazy rn.
