What a night, the johnson knockout on glovier within 13 seconds was prob the move ov the evening. Anyone else think diaz should've won that, and that the judges were a bit rigged for mcgregor

hugsyou - August 20, 2016, 9:38 pm

Yeah it was a fraud. diaz is to real for all of us.

iNk. - August 20, 2016, 9:38 pm

The amount of money they made just from the 25 mins those guys fought is probably matching the amount of money hf and all of it's users made in the past 5 years

I don't think it's rigged to be honest. This fight was insanely back and forth. Personally, I would've picked Diaz as the winner based off of the final few seconds because he dominated; however, Conor did land a ton of successful kicks and punches in the fifth round.

McGregor got a second wind, and you really can't take the win away from him.

Ash Ketchum - August 20, 2016, 9:50 pm

All you mc gregor haters go fuck yourselves, he is the one true champion went up in weight kicked diazs' ass, lets see if diaz goes down in weight 2 get dropped again.

I don't think you realize, but the people from the UFC don't judge the fights, it's the Nevada State Commission.

You give the McGregor fans a bad name. I agree in the sense that I too like McGregor; however, you should rebuttal with some sense rather than telling them to fuck off.

Lipton's Ice Tea™ - August 20, 2016, 9:52 pm

Do any of you know how round scoring works? Conor won 3 rounds. Go watch it back. He won the fight fair and square by 3 qualified judges.

Stop calling the stupid fucking rigged card. Good fight.

McDolands - August 20, 2016, 9:52 pm

Calm down 13 yr old mcgregor fanboys I'm not hating on mcgregor, I was rooting for him during the fight. But the fact that diaz had more significant strikes, and strikes in general + he got him to the ground at the end makes it look like it was sort of rigged

Nate Diaz fights at 155, only 10 pounds heavier than Conor's weight class, lol what're you talking about?

SIM-2228224 - August 20, 2016, 9:55 pm

All Nate really had on him was an elbow and half a takedown. Connor reversed a few clinches to the fence and defended well against Nate's multiple takedown attempts. All it took was jabs to put Diaz on the ground, and it happened several times. The fight was pretty close, but it's clear who fought the better fight; not rigged at all. Had there been a few seconds left in the fight, Diaz might've taken the W.

The NSAC is funded by the Nevada legislature. It's not privately funded, nor does it accept donations. Ever since the mob ran boxing till the 90's they've kept a close eye on bribes.

mcgregor gets points for defending, he stopped like 5 take downs which is bigger then a take down on the bell.

I'm not assuming that we do. But I'd rather assume that Conor McGregor won that fight, which I saw than assume that by somehow or someway someone bribed two of the judges to go to McGregor. Him actually winning is a lot easier and a lot more plausible than what you're assuming.

You've been here since 2009, I can only assume your prolonged exposure to Hack Forums and I'm assuming /pol/ and maybe even /b/ on 4chan has turned you into a government hating conspiracy theorist who feels like he must try and defy the government who's been running since 1776 because he feels like he needs to make a difference. But hey, keep your tin-foil hat on and keep believing Nate won that fight.
