I like the concept, the only things that throws me off is the faint blur on the long rectangles (idk if it's intentional or not), the connections at the top from the center half loop to both vertical rectangles, and the center half loop not matching the same width as the outer quarter loops (again, idk if intentional or not). Pretty good if you fix those things.

Agreed. So clean and simple. I like the red borderish aswell. Perfect example of a simple but yet perfect logo.

Its very clean and simple, but its not for me. I prefer something with a bit more "weight" to it. Its a very subjective thing.

Did you make it from scratch? No vectors.

Simple, clean and effective = good logo.

SupRO - August 27, 2016, 5:52 pm

I like the overall design. One thing.

1: portrait either refers to an image/painting of a person where especially the head and shoulders are visible OR

2: the picture is higher than wide in size which the markers do not represent.

Maybe I am a bit harsh but that will literally make it perfection

skillzforme - August 27, 2016, 5:53 pm
