Thread: Am I the only one who feels like they didn't really learn anything at school?

Cannooo - August 27, 2016, 4:03 pm

And it's really bad, because this autumn i'm going to become a 10th grader. And in the 10th grade there will be these super important so called 'state exams' for pretty much every subject there is. I'm freaking out right now because i just feel like i don't remember ANYTHING at all that i learned for the past 9 years of school (besides the 2nd language). How the fuck am i suppose to pass those tests without knowing anything...

Does anyone feel the same? Or felt the same? if yes then how did you treat your situation?

ohxerxe - August 27, 2016, 4:04 pm

You will most likely review for these sort of tests as you would for any other regular test dont sweat it

Reven?nt - August 27, 2016, 4:05 pm

Most likely you just need to brush up on some things. Many people (including myself) don't remember everything they learned through their years in highschool.

You are mainly supposed to learn how to think and learn in school. It's not about learning facts.

Bolol - August 27, 2016, 4:07 pm your not. when i was 15 or something, i dropped out.

I agree with you. A lot of people told me that school is actually not a place to gain knowledge, but instead to develop your brain and in the end to just get that goddamn paper that says that you finished the damn thing... But until you graduate, you actually need to remember the stuff to pass exams and so on...

Black Kodak - August 27, 2016, 4:09 pm

I feel like I understand school, I feel like I learn stuff in certain classes, but no all classes....

But I'm sure their will be some sort of review for you before the state exams.

I don't know where you live, but in my country the law states that you actually need to finish 10th grade and be at least 16 years old in-order to drop out of school. And I'm not planning to drop out.

Blue Shadow - August 27, 2016, 4:10 pm

School taught me little to no useful info after middle school.

I graduated with A's and B's mediocre grades on state exams (and I failed 2 AP tests).

Never did a single piece of homework.

Still accepted into many colleges (however I'm not going)

Started my own growing local (internationally online as well soon) business making a few grand a month.

Don't sweat your grades or tests. They don't mean as much as they want you to think.

Thanks man. These words mean a lot to me since I don't usually do well at school...

At the end it's worth. You will regret it your whole life. Just do it.

Fuckadoodledoo - August 27, 2016, 4:20 pm

Personally I think just having common sense and some general knowledge is more important than more the things that you get taught in school.

I needed English, Maths and IT grades above C to get into my college (apprenticeship), although if you didn't have them you could just do some quick exam shit in college to get them. I spent 3 years there doing something I actually wanted to do and something I was actually interested in and now I'm in a well paying job as a result.

In my opinion I wish I was more relaxed with school, I took it too seriously and tried too hard. I should have had more fun with my friends and not let it stress me out

Back to the main topic. I don't know if I made it clear, but... i can't remember shit lol. A week worth of math education usually disappears after 2 days or so and then the upcoming math lesson feel like the first math lesson i had in my entire life. Kinda ironic because i'd say i have a pretty good memory. For example; i can visually remember things that I did 5 years ago.. but when it comes to school- i ain't gonna remember fo shit.

DONT USE ROCKETR - August 27, 2016, 4:33 pm

The point of school itself isn't for future reference for most things. Example some things in math are to just to unlock your head and make you more productive..

y-ye-yeah..i guess. I mean who doesn't, right??

yotoprules - August 27, 2016, 4:41 pm

Don't worry, I struggle at school at a lot of things, 90% of what I learn is just useless knowledge that:
1) I don't need in my life at all
2) Is a complete waste of time

But I'm going into Year 10 in septempber, idk if that is the same as 10th Grade but I guess you just gotta try, because there is nothing else you can do. If you don't try you get lower grades and less likely to get a job

Because I thought NoFap could help you when your answer would be yes

I mean, no one would ask such a question randomly... especially when it's not related to the actual topic.

I read a lot of time in the Reddit that problems with one's memory can be very often connected to a lot of masturbating. That's why I asked whether you do it a lot, so I could give you this advice.

Got it now? lol

Thank you for explaining. And thank you for making me feel like i'm already back at school.

As others have said it only makes sense that they would provide you with a review of some kind, or a way to study what will be on the test.

Why do you even need school, when you have this lovely hackforums? :)
