Thread: Ao no Kanata no Four Rhythm

Quote:Ao no Kanata no Four Rhythm is set in a world where people can take to the skies, soaring above land and sea. An area called the Four Islands Archipelago has a technology called Grav-Shoes, which allow the wearer to fly. Aside from simple transportation, people also use these shoes in a competition called FC (Flying Circus). To score points, they either touch buoys floating above the ocean, or their opponent's backs.

The energetic but ditzy Asuka Kurashina transfers to Kunahama Academy, a high school in the Four Islands Archipelago, from the outside world. She joins Misaki Tobisawa and Masaya Hinata's second year class. Her lack of experience and general clumsiness make her classmates worry if she can learn to fly properly, but she quickly develops an interest in FC, and she, Misaki, and Mashiro, a freshman, join the school's tiny FC club. But Masaya seems reluctant for some reason, even though he seems to know a lot about the sport.

Well I was expecting a different kind of Anime for the genre it is, and I pretty much got what I hoped for. I guess a lot of people will find it boring, but I found the sport they play in it really interesting so it made me enjoy the Anime despite the fact that I didn't see (so far) what I wanted to want from the male protagonist.

It was kind of generic but the cute girls made up for it. Yeah that sport they played was pretty cool though.

I didn't like how the female lead went from zero to hero, and it would have also been nice if the male lead got involved in the competition rather than staying on the sidelines as support/tactician for the team.

anime says Male protagonists. takes 10 episodes for him to something relevant, but for only 1 minute.

Genre'd romance, no romance to be found.

Is this the clickbait of anime?

Seen like 2 episodes and I disliked the females so I stopped watching. Gonna give this another go later today.

I will add it to my PTW list, it does seem a wee bit iffy from just the synopsis, but from many of the reviews sounds like there is a lot more that goes on so I will give it a try in the future.

I've watched most of it, enjoyed the first few episodes but then didn't feel like it, but continued just for the sake of completing unfinished thing... and been stalling at like ep8 for couple months now XD
