That's probably true, but if they can't secure it enough that some random person can reverse it, they shouldn't sell it.

conormctapper - August 31, 2016, 8:18 am

And you somehow think that with 46 rep and your desperate attempts to lure people in your future paid cheat version, you inspire trust? You've been caught re-selling a garbage c+p cheat of someone else in the past -which I'm cool with because that's what I do to make money in a nutshell then pretend to be scamming people when I'm not- and you now take slow steps into farming rep from some random idiots, releasing a "public" cheat, then freebies, then oh hey a paid version. You need to do better than that. I can mentor you but it will certainly won't be for free.

Casads - August 31, 2016, 8:20 am

I'll take a 1 day trial and test them out.

Nice comma; however, you've used it incorrectly.

Rizla, the only person to try to sell mentoring on scamming. Funny shit, he thinks he's so good at SEing but has had less than 10 customers lifetime.
