Has anyone ever got a PERM LIMITED PAYPAL account unlimited?

1MPERATOR - September 1, 2016, 1:09 am

I did it once, but a month later it was banned again.

So i assume it was a mistake.

I've gotten a few unlimited. It's possible; you just have to sweet talk the reps

I've been doing so much research. Apparently if your perm limited no reps can save you.

My main/own account was permanent limited once; I called them and said things about I would like my 50+$ back, because I wanted it.

Then I got transfered to someone high-up within the staff, he asked if I could send my ID-Card (Passport) and other stuff to them. Then they removed the permanent stuff, they even said it was their fault. :P

Doubt that it was perm limited. Probably just their 1k limit (anti-laundering shit).

Even "Therefore, your account has been permanently limited" limitations?

Those are the ones I'm talking about.

yes, I did, but it all depends on why it got limited etc

Mooncake - September 1, 2016, 5:27 pm

It's truly simple. You opt to submit validation in the form of documents and once you talk to the right person, they'd allow you to appeal.

Secrets - September 1, 2016, 5:30 pm

Once you're perm limited ain't no appealing or fixing that account lol .

You can have the chance to withdraw any funds by check or bank account after 45/90/180 days depending on your circumstance and your limitation reason . But a few calls and chit chat never hurt ?

Cryptic™ - September 1, 2016, 5:30 pm

My account was perm limited like 7 years ago. I called them back 8 months after the perm limit, found a nice manager and he gave me a second chance.

Haven't had any issues since.

Mine was limited due to a high number of disputes/chargebacks, back then I used to run a popular RSPS...so yeah. I didn't know about fake pp accs back then.

Now I funnel all my money through a few stealth accounts and then move it to my real.

That way, even if I do get chargebacks, I don't really lose money lol. Cuz the acc is neg, just move on to a new fake acc

Multiple people here in this thread have already stated they've fixed permanently limited accounts. I've done it to several accounts, including my own twice. I used to have a service doing it for people.

Quit chattin about shit you dont know about

Coton Pker - September 1, 2016, 5:35 pm

I have when I was selling RSGP and accounts.

I was limited permanently for unauthorized virtual item sales.. and I had to sweet talk a few CSR's for them to do it, but I did get one who was cool. Had to provide all the necessary paperwork (ID, SScard, shit like that).

the terms were that I could only use my account for buying and not selling, and I had to call a phone number to get a PIN number for each transaction I wanted to do.

it only lasted like that for about a year, then it just kinda went away.

I'm not sure why, and nothing was said to me about it further.. but that was some 6 years ago and I still use the same account.

I'm confident in the truthfulness of Orgy's insistence that reversing a permanent limitation is possible. You'd feel the same way if you knew how many issues he's resolved.
