

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How to use trial version software forever

richhacks - September 12, 2016, 4:56 am

When software's are installed for the first time, they make an entry into the Windows Registry with the details such as Installed Date and Time, installed path etc. After installation every time you run the software, it compares the current system date and time with the installed date and time. So, with this it can make out whether the trial period is expired or not.

[img]<http://www.freewarefiles.com/screenshot/runasdate.jpg>[/img]

VT:<https://www.virustotal.com/en/file/d123de359a2adf4c486b27b3091c65922db0bc8f24f05b3d6067adb190b305a8/analysis/>

Download:<http://adf.ly/1duKZn> ?

InvictusLatinus - September 12, 2016, 7:21 am

Is this not NirSoft's RunAsDate program? If so why haven't you provided the original/official website that leads to the download of the program?

Evanescence - September 12, 2016, 7:22 am

Looks good but the user above claims the official source. Please give credits if so.

ToastbrotMaker - September 12, 2016, 2:21 pm

lol gg thats a really nice idea :D

MultiRage - September 13, 2016, 2:56 pm

You could just use Patches, I guess it all depends what software you are trying to have forever.

Rip miK - September 14, 2016, 12:43 pm

Pretty interesting idea I'll have to try out the program in the future.

Darb - September 16, 2016, 4:03 am

Actually a nice way, but it's almost a very old trick and only works on some smaller programs.