Thread: Should I sell my Foot Locker Employee Discount?

Teresa - September 14, 2016, 9:45 pm

I work at Foot Locker, and because of that I have an associate card that allows me to get 30% off any purchase I make at a Foot Locker store/branch (Foot Locker, Kids Foot Locker, Lady's Foot Locker, Footaction, Champs).

In addition to the associate card, I can also fill out a form online and get a 30% off code to use for online purchases (I can only generate one a day and the code expires after 24 hours).

This seems like a item that a lot of people would be interested in, seeing that if they buy a shoe that's like $200 they can get $60 off and stuff like that.

Only thing is that employees are limited to $500 in discounts per month, so if the first person to buy a code and uses gets $60 off then I only have $440 left for the others who buy.

I think they will see something sketchy is going on.

You'll make less money from the sales than you currently do at footlocker.. Definitely not worth it considering footlocker definitely have a clause preventing employee discounts being used in this way.

Or you could buy shoes that's hot on the market right now with the discount you have then resell the shoes at the original price or more. Kids do that in my town and make a living.

Teens, don't risk your job like this. They'd see the numerous different addresses and most likely recognize something is going on.

The risk is far greater than the reward, in my opinion.

Yeah kids in my school do this and make bank it's actually crazy.

You're definitely not the first employee to think of this so I think it's safe to assume they'd find out and fire you.

Bro just resell the shoes tf? You pretty much get whatever shoe you want in the entire store without having to wait in line or do raffles or whatever the fuck. shit you could get pairs early and sell those too. Just do that it's obvious you've never actually worked at a shoe store like footlocker, it doesn't work like that at all first things first for an employee to be able to hold a shoe on release day your hook-up has to be at least 20% for the week (at least 1 in 5 people that you ring up would have had to buy something with the shoes - ex. a shirt. shoe cleaner and such doesn't count)

also, for limited releases like the Bred 1s, the managers get to get their size, and if one of the managers doesn't want the shoe then they do an employee raffle to see which employee can get a pair

and no one gets pairs early, period
