Shuumatsu no Izetta
Izetta: The Last Witch

Synopsis courtesy of MAL
If I am promised to the princess, then I will fight for her sake.

In 1939 C.E., the imperialist nation of Germania invaded a neighboring country. All at once, that war spread throughout Europe, and the era was dragged into a spiral of a great war.

Then, in 1940, Germania's attack turned towards the Principality of Elystadt, a small Alps country abundant with beautiful water and greenery.

There's magic.

First episode was pretty good. Princess is badass.

I don't know why, but I find myself disliking most Animes where the MC is a female.. Not even trying to be sexist it just bores me lmao.

Kinda why I have Yona of the Dawn on hold, not that I'm some lonely fuck living my life through male MCs that have harems or anything but I just find anime with Female leads extremely boring

I have mixed feelings based on those previews, but I'll give it a shot and see for myself, because it seems like it is heavily dialogue based.

Has anyone seen the first episode yet? If so, does it have cliff hangers? I REALLY want to watch this, but can't stand airing anime with cliff hangers

Not sure of the extent as we didn't see much magic other than a plane getting blown up and using a rifle as a broomstick.
