Thread: Chod's Firefly Review

Jire - October 5, 2016, 8:05 pm

Lots of problems with this cheat.

Settings randomly turn on/off, as in I configure a setting and save it and it doesn't actually save. Randomly during a match settings will flick on/off, and random configs will be loaded at random times of the match which caused my account to be overwatch banned from rage config being loaded mid-match.

The visuals drop FPS so hard that I have to disable just about all of them to get a playable frame rate. I have a GTX 780 and an i5 4670K @ 4.4GHz, and this cheat drops my FPS from constantly 300 to 110 FPS or lower, sometimes even dipping below 60. Adjusting the CS:GO graphics settings has no effect, and does not improve FPS.

The aimbot is incredibly obvious even with bezier curve and max smoothing. I have tried loads of different settings and they all are either ineffective (i.e., don't actually aim or do so little to assist you that you may as well be playing legit) or just ridiculously obvious.

Half of the time dragging your crosshair over somebody while holding the aim key causes the aimbot to flick randomly and not work. This is especially bad when playing a crucial game moment only to have aimbot randomly fail and flick to random locations.

SparkMasterTape - October 5, 2016, 8:27 pm nice review bro. thanks for letting everyone know.

Soulstar842 - October 5, 2016, 8:51 pm

Never had this problem with the cheat, are you sure you didn't configure it incorrectly?

Edit: I have heard other people complain about the FPS issue (which can most likely be fixed) but the aimbot issue you are having is the first I have heard of it.

STYLING - October 5, 2016, 9:42 pm what is a good cheat according to u mr jire? seems like u like to bash on every p2c/slotted cheat out there except for java coded ones :^)

sn0wing - October 6, 2016, 1:02 am

Looks like we have tried two different cheats. In around 50 hours of gameplay, playing on leagues with it stomping people left and right (specially on faceit where plebs use mouseevent shit) and not faced a single issue you've had.

I've come to a conclusion Jire.. I didn't believe those dumb wannabe-trolls when they called you autistic but I've changed my mind.

zohanhacks - October 6, 2016, 1:12 am

Lmao so i guess your using 5 fov then? like interwebz?

1tap - October 6, 2016, 1:21 am

Jire trashes Every cheat.

10/10 review expect a chargeback

You all may be right, but a customer is a customer and if he's not happy then I'll try and change that. I've added an extra month on to OP's subscription, hopefully all the problems he is having will be resolved by then.

There are some FPS issues at the moment, we are working on that. The cheat is still very young so there's bound to be issues still.

EDIT: Having had a look at your configs, as we suspected you have turned on weapon configs but not actually set any weapon configs up. That's why you're seeing features "turn on and off by themselves". Before making a trash thread, don't you think it'd be wise to learn how to use the cheat, ask some questions, read the guides? Also you have an FOV of 10, hardly legit. I don't think that gives you grounds to complain about flicking when you've also set the aimbot speed to 0.37 seconds (pro speed is about 0.2 seconds so what did you expect it to look like?).

Thank you very much for the kind gesture, but please do a giveaway of some sort for the extra month instead of using it on me.

I cannot access your site half the time for some reason, was unable to find any guides, and even used other people's configs (including admins). I deleted all the other configs in the hope it would fix the random config switching problem, which I now know can be from weapon configs.

As far as FOV, 10 "isn't legit" because you don't scale FOV based on distance. The result is far away you lock on in huge ranges but up close it's much harder to lock on. I suggest adding distance scaling, probably as an option. Typically I use 60+, even 90 FOV for aim assistance.

The reason you have aim speed is because your aim assist is fundamentally different. Instead of allowing free mouse movement during the aim assistance, the assist completely takes over your mouse and goes along a set path instead of constantly adjusting to where the player moved the mouse. My guess is the cheat is written without free stack suspension, which doesn't really allow you to do what I want. The flicks are a result of the cheat not completely locking the mouse but controlling it so tightly.

Oh yeah, while I'm at it, there's also no checks for the aim of you have a knife out or even a bomb. That should be a given by default.

You've got some cool ideas and overall it seems like it could be nice with more attention put into the basic essentials of what makes a cheat easy and pleasurable to use.

Lexy - October 6, 2016, 4:47 am

I swear Jire bashes every cheat. He's not even a customer, Chod, he bought it to use it perfectly fine and then trashed it so it would have a small userbase 1) so there isn't a big chance of VAC 2) he knows if he uses Firefly he won't get untrusted

With regard to the weapon configs, in light of what you've said we are going to add an alert to users who have changed things in the menu but have weapon configs on and exit the menu without saving, as doing this causes the issue you've mentioned when changing weapons.

There is already a bug report for FOV, this will be done in time. But given you are aware that the FOV is based on degrees and not distance based, that indicates you are nitpicking.

There is literally a toggle on the first page of the menu to enable mouse control whilst aiming:

And also "free stack suspension"... If you're going to make up terminology at least make it sound feasible. "Free" and "Suspension" are two very contradictory words.

I'll be honest with you, after reading some of your posts you seem like an intelligent guy but you really come across like you think you're better than everybody else. At the end of the day this project has been out less than 1 week. According to your github repo you have been developing Abendigo since November 2015, so to judge something so quickly when you yourself are still working on something after nearly a whole year is not only hypocritical, its just senseless. It really seems like the only reason you posted this thread was to draw attention to yourself, maybe I am wrong. It just doesn't make much sense, rather than get support for something you spent money on, you'd rather publicly bash it.

You're not the first provider where he has managed to configure a cheat incorrectly, then bash it because it doesn't look legit or having issues.

@OP you've clearly no idea on how to configure cheats, other than your own.

Don't mind OP , he's definitely the definition of autism I'm pretty sure of that. He just trashes every cheat and thinks he is the best into the scene and I'm starting to think he might be one of Vuno's 59000th account.
