This has helped me so much lately. I listen to it every morning. I know there's some people here going through tough times. Take a few minutes to listen to this :)

Everyone Has A Purpose – Inspirational Speech Ft. Chris Ross

If you are unsure of what your purpose is, don't worry.

The worst thing you could do, is get yourself worried that you haven't found it yet, ?or say something like 'i have no purpose in life'

It will never be absolutely essential you have a great, big, grand purpose.

What is essential is that you commit to working on yourself every single day.

That you become obsessed with self development. Obsessed with growing your mindset, feeding your mind with positive thoughts every day. Feeding your mind with successful thoughts.

Learning more.

This can be through reading books on success and personal development, or simply watching videos, podcasts and listening to valuable audio books – ANYTHING that is going to push your mind to evolve to the next level!

Make a commitment to develop the mental strength needed, then, over time you will begin to discover your purpose – it WILL come to you, if you keep working on yourself.

And by the way your purpose will most likely change over time, because we should always be growing and evolving.

I like to think of self development, always like fitness.

If you want to be fit and strong what do you need to do?

You need to commit to working out every single day, otherwise you can not grow stronger. ??If you stop working out, what happens? You become weaker.

The same is true for your MENTAL strength. ?The more you read, the more you learn, the more you ?learn from the TRULY successful, the stronger your mind will become, ?and the more successful YOU will become.

Like fitness though, if you stop working on yourself, your mind will get weaker.

You must make the commitment that nothing is more important than your self development, because a stronger you is a better you, and a better you is better for everyone around you.

Never stop working on yourself.

It is a daily process, a journey not a destination.

Everyone has a purpose, and that purpose is simply to be happy.

It's what everyone is chasing.?? That guy that wants to be a multi millionaire – all he really wants is the happiness he thinks the money will bring.

That girl that wants the perfect relationship – what she really wants is the happiness she believes it will bring.

Everyone is chasing material things, but no one is making a commitment to just stop and make it a priority.

Make it a priority to always be searching for the best in life. ??If that means eliminating bad habits – DO IT NOW. What is more important?

So now you know your purpose, get out there and work on yourself.

Work on your happiness.

Make it a priority, that your happiness is more important than ANYTHING.

Live each moment as if it's your last?. Be light-hearted. Don't take this life too seriously, but make the most of it while you are here.

Be YOU & never apologize for it!
