Thread: OpenVPN client developer \(Windows and/or iOS\)

Carl Elias - October 25, 2016, 9:10 pm

Hello

I am looking to find someone willing to code a completely custom Openvpn client for a VPN company I work for.

We would like to simply at first just show account details and connecting and disconnecting but might add more on later.

The developer can code in any language they want but the only constraint is it must be very low dependent I do not want it to be requiring the latest NET framework or anything like that. Also if the developer also knows php and is willing to make the API portion as well that would be great but not required.

Pay is negotiable. But no money will be sent until we receive something. Whether it simply be the design or just the login portion. We will most likely break the payments into pieces to avoid scams or people who start then back out.

If you have any questions please PM me!
