There is a 2.5% Tax on every game.

Feedback is appreciated!! Let us know what you think! Or any suggestions!

That's not what he asked. Is it probably fair?

Also, I love how you write there's no house edge but you take a "tax". Well, it technically isn't a house edge, but it results in exactly the same thing.

That is one way to look at it but house edge makes it more so the house has better odds then you.
You opponent has the same odds as you in this game.

To make it provably fair, you need to show that the decided results is predetermined and not changed during the play.

There is no house edge because you don't play against the house. That doesn't change that your EV is negative, just like if there was a house edge.

It seems like you don't even know what provably fair means, or you do know it and actually rig it.

The site has received an update!

We have fixed all known bugs and tested for more!

We currently have four lobbies to play in $.50,$1,$2,$5

We now have added the option to leave the lobby after you press play!

We also have updated the game, it will now take your money after you have been matched with an opponent!

Your patience is appreciated as well as your feedback is appreciated! Have fun gambling!

the 2.5% fee = the house edge

You can also do a game against the house

bet 100 and you'd win 97.5+your 100

So no betting will net everyone but the site owner a loss in the long run Really nice design concept. Played a few time and I love that now you can leave!

Design and layout could use some work.

D?ndy - November 3, 2016, 2:50 pm

Some constructive criticism.

Simultaneously as opening the site you claim it to be, and I quote "Most popular and trusted bitcoin game in the world", now after the humble introduction We are the first bitcoin gambling to have player vs player gambling.

Both claims are not only false, but I would consider them a large lie, as no one can be that blind to the multi-millionaire bitcoin gambling sites out there that already have this feature.

I am in no way raining on your parade, but maybe you are on mine...

to shortly introduce myself, I am a software engineer whom have have helped lift and construct various multi-million businesses to their feet, with my years of experience but not least devotion to what I do.

PVP AKA "Player VS Player" has been around in various forums of currency for decades, and we also saw the PVP action introduced to Bitcoin as early as the creation of bitcoin.

So my question is, with this little project, where you are unable to store people's data by simply adding a on-site cookie creator and attach it to the hardware ID of the PC logging in, why do you barge in with such claims ?

What you have done, people have done before, so share the space with the people whom have you beat with this PVP Bitcoin game-mode and don't walk in as if you own the place.

In the eye of someone whom has knowledge about coding and multi-platform website construction, and take it as a friendly advice, they are happy to see this grow cause you have 4 major security flaws found on the top of my limited research, cause whom wouldn't cheer on a website where they could eventually harvest the profits.

You are aiming high, and ambition is great, just don't start at a height where you cannot survive a fall from.

Be humble.

RIGGEDWe have many people who have played and vouched that they have won a lot of money. This is a Player Vs Player game. "Bots" would do nothing as every person is playing anyone who comes to play. You and your friend could go both make accounts and play each other. You saying that the site has bots to play in each lobby makes 0 sense. As for you playing yourself show some proof? It is impossible to play yourself either way the money would end up back into your account.

This site is actually really cool. Most of the early replies on this thread are idiots who can't read the instructions.

I won twice, made a profit already. I'm waiting for more people to get online right now.
