2013

I joined Hack Forums because a lot of my Xbox friends (Inspire, Sean, Jedi etc) told me about the website and what it was about. At this point in time all I did on the forum was just lurk around the Online Accounts & Gamertags section. I was very interested in purchasing an Original Gamertags so I could be "cool" like all of my friends. It was very hard though as I was new to the site, had no rep or anyone that could vouch for me. This is how I met my good friend Junior (Maximum). He had a thread up selling the Gamertag 'roll'. I couldn't PM as I didn't have enough post so I posted on the thread and he PM'ed me with his Skype. I ended up making an offer of $900. He took it and demanded that it was done through Western Union, so I did and everything, it went super smooth. After that I started making deals more often. Later that year, I was going through some stuff in real life including depression, anxiety, personal problems etc. I was willing to commit suicide as I felt alone so I decided to come to the only place where I felt like I had friends. I then posted a thread in The Lounge explaining my situation and because of all the members that posted on the thread and made me feel like I was appreciated and what not I decided to not go through with it and for that I will always thank Hack Forums.

2014

I still wasn't super active on the site, but I was getting there. I really started getting into the Gamertag scene as I was a huge Xbox fan at the time. I either started buying Gamertags and reselling them or buying Gamertags from original owners for cheap and making huge profit selling them on the site. Sometimes I kept some of them, which eventually ended up being turbo'd from me.

2015

At this point I was really getting tired of Xbox so I decided to put some of my best Gamertags up for sale on the market, some of which cost couple thousands of dollars, or at least that's what I sold it for.

2016

This year I've tried my best to stay as active as possible even though work takes up a lot of my time. Even though earlier this year I sold some tenure Xbox accounts, as well as Gamertags, I decided to take a break from the Gamertag scene, at least for a while, as I don't even play Xbox anymore. I focused on Currency Exchange a lot as well as the Pokemon Go section due to the fact that I'm a huge Pokemon fan, and when I found out that Hack Forums had a section for it, I went nuts! I've also hosted some giveaways to give back to the community.
