Thread: Opinion on what I should do about my CSGO situation

Robbie Weirdicht - October 29, 2016, 11:47 am

So I bought iwebz a while ago and have it until march 2017 still and because it got detected a few months ago, I got banned then it must've got detected again and I got banned again but they never said it was detected and they just updated it I'm guessing, so I lost two account and I just simply with all the stuff I already have to pay for in my life I rarely have enough money left at the end of all my direct debits and stuff to buy things let alone afford CSGO again so I was wondering what you guys of HF think I should do?

Do I sell the iwebz if it's allowed or just let it go to waste? I was global with cheats and supreme legit and I've never been overwatch banned and I rarely got called out because I was good anyway so played smart.

I've been off the game for a few weeks now and I really miss it to be honest haha, all my friends play but they don't have spare accounts/smurfs and I've asked if anyone would gift it but they don't like doing that as none of them work hahaha.

So any suggestions as to what I should do would be great please :)

If you have a product that doesn't work anymore, please don't sell it. Unless if I'm misunderstanding this, I would just let it go to waste.

Well, it's your problem sorry to say.. it's your fault that you cheat with detected cheat and also cheating.

If you are allowed to sell your cheat account so go for it, buy new CSGO and start a clean way without cheating, because cheating will bring you to nowhere.

You should request to get your subscription paused until you get a new CS:GO account.

Don't cheat if you can't handle bans.

Currently trying to get it paused as it'd be a waste of a lot of bitcoin, I rarely do cheat as I said I'm supreme without cheats but it'd be nice to not let my money or the cheats just go to waste while I can't afford to buy the game.
