Thread: CGI anime

Just finished ajin which was made with CGI and i'm not sure how I feel about it.

I like it but I think I prefer to just have regular animations as the fights and such look pretty sloppy with CGI.

Not sure want other people's opinions maybe i'm just stuck in old times.

Personally Ajin was the only anime to pull CGI off properly.

Ya I feel like I was only able to watch it because I liked the story.

Although you are right about it looking a little weird in fight scenes, it really makes the anime feel unique.

Compared to a few other CGI animes I've seen, it wasn't too sloppy or distracting. It actually kind of complemented the effects they were trying to pull off.

True I feel like it was one of a kind anime.

It's horrendous.

I tried watching Ajin after finishing parasyte and the frame rate was beyond garbage. The animation style was fine, but dear god the frame rate.

Fight scenes were better than Beck. If you can watch the fight scenes in Beck you can watch anything.

Well it depends on a Variety of factors I mean this:

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=n6nL6i5jOaY>]

Was done by at the time very unexperienced animators and it's incredible. Imagine someone like Mouny Oum had the resources to do this like on a professional, it would be amazing.

p.s. Chapter 4 has started and the animation got leaps better.

there can be good CGI anime but the problem is finding people that are good at integrating the two styles and Have Motion Capture and all as well as funds for this could be a problem.

Little Trivia: RWBY's fight scenes are based on real martial Arts and many motions seem realistic because they use motion capture and then edit the FLy High stuff and more. Also this food fight took 7 months to make WoW!

RWBY's not anime that I know, but there are many simple tips and tricks this cartoon here here that will highly benefit CGI animation.

I feel like I'm literally one of the only people who don't care much about graphics.

Try watching Kingdom and rate it a 9/10 like me. The CGI there is terrible but I don't really mind it, the plot is amazing

Don't get me wrong, aside from Clannad I don't care about animation style. But when it's literally unwatchable like Ajins framerate it's different

Watch Kingdom Season 1, 5 minutes into the episode you'll be clawing your eyes out tbh CGI anime just grosses me out, idk why but it just does

Professor Pantsu - November 3, 2016, 1:32 pm

I hate it but I feel like CGI is the future of anime. It killed Berserk IMO, Ajin it was tolerable. The bit of CGI they throw in the flight scenes of Brave Witches is really ruining it IMO. I hope they change it on the BDs.

Doubt it will change honestly most people enjoy the old animation.

But it's easier to animate with cgi. It's become more and more common and now we have anime that is full cgi.

Its easier sure but it looks like my dodo

Chips Ahoy McCoy - November 4, 2016, 5:06 am

CGI is fine. It's all about how it's implemented. For example, did you know the original Death Note had CGI in it's first OP? Also, check out the trailer of "Violet Evergarden." Which, mind you, is all CGI.

Hopefully this video can demonstrate the point i'm trying to make.

That hasn't stopped them from adding more and more CGI into anime.

Ajin is alright, the CGI is not unbearable, it is okay. But some CGI anime is too bad IMO. Like series like Bubanki Buranki Or whatever you call it, the combination of its horrid CGI and my lack of interest in its story made me drop it after the first episode.

Many anime implement CGI very subtly? inside there anime now a days where it isn't bad at all, they so mostly 2d and then there will be a little CG some places you wont even notice unless your looking.

And EDIT: to quote Forsaken Above. The CGI in Kingdom is pretty bad if your not used to it, but if you stick through the first episode you'll become immersed in the show and it won't even matter anymore. Kingdom is legit one of the most addictive and best anime series ever, I would try again to watch it if you gave up on it early.
