Old Userbars I like.

the old school style also allowed you to slightly design outside of the template it might open up for some extra options as seen in these userbars, although I like the designs below as well too.

I read this as Enigma and thought the owner of that group just pulled a quick one.

Good luck to anybody who attempts this, no wings pls.

Good luck man, I think you'll be able to manage this for sure. :)

To people who work on these user-bars, the old school style also allowed you to slightly design outside of the template it might open up for some extra options as seen in these userbars:

the old school style also allowed you to slightly design outside of the template it might open up for some extra options as seen in these userbars, although I like the designs below as well too.

I feel like no one understands that just because it's a old template..
Means it needs to seriously have a "old" look.

Look at all of these, they all use the template..
But don't make it look like it was made in MS Paint.

I will say that a lot of the old groups who choose userbars like the ones I'm looking for did have a more wide verity of HQ userbars to choose from the userbar quality can remain high while being in the old style I've noticed that zooming in on some of my submissions look much worse then zooming in on some of the old group userbars.

I'm not sure what I can really say to inspire anyone to improve this, as I'm not a graphics designer and I don't know what it takes but more high quality designs would be appreciated yes.

Find me someone I quoted that ended up getting chosen?

EDIT: Ok, I just went through and quoted all of your submissions and left feedback on each one.

They all say the same thing..

Your design quality is low quality. By that, I don't mean it just looks ugly.
Like truly quality wise, it's low. I have seen better work from you.
And it feels like just because it's a old userbar template, you pair that with less quality userbars..

I know I sound harsh, but I know Doge, You, and the other designers have it in you..
That's why I am getting mad.. Because you guys could easily rock this.
It just seems like quality wise you guys are lacking..
Doge has came with some higher quality submissions..
But I still feel like those where plain..

I am going to pose an idea to designers -

Notice how in the Red Lions Userbar, the original template was used for writing, while a significant design was created around that original template. Maybe someone can continue with this idea where the smaller template contains some form of material, but the remainder of the allotted userbar space is also used. Fill the dimensions of the userbar around the existing template.

Just something to think about.

Exactly, people are totally forgetting the original template and just re-coloring it, changing it and so on.

If someone could leave the original template as it is or just slightly edit it, and make it look like the red lion one, it'd be awesome.

(Nov 6, 2016 10:54 PM)Confound Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I am going to pose an idea to designers -

Notice how in the Red Lions Userbar, the original template was used for writing, while a significant design was created around that original template. Maybe someone can continue with this idea where the smaller template contains some form of material, but the remainder of the allotted userbar space is also used. Fill the dimensions of the userbar around the existing template.

Just something to think about.

Thing is, OP wants to use the most original userbar template. The RedLion's template was resized to make room for more detail around the edges. With the maximum dimensions for userbars allowed on HF and the original template, there's only a few pixels of space around the edges.

On an otherwise unrelated note, I played around a bit more:

I used the dimensions from the original template and just made it a little more transparent. I see where you are coming from though.
