1: He owe's you a refund, no doubt about that

2: Matching IP's is not a definitive way of confirming someones a multi

That's simply not true...it's just probably beyond your capabilities but it might not be.

Not sure what nosferatus was going for here.

Ainaj - November 14, 2016, 5:10 pm

It's always funny when people have no idea how btc works. When you're at 1 confirm, it's pretty much impossible to double spend.

OP, you were scammed, hope you get a refund.

Why the fuck doesn't he simply deliver the product if I may ask?

SUI-3183372 - November 14, 2016, 8:31 pm

It was due to the nature of the transaction. There was a very large output going to numerous addresses.

For the first couple confirmations I understand waiting. However, he is safe to refund you now.

Invulner - November 15, 2016, 1:00 am

He still refuses to refund he says he uses bitcoin for 3 years but hasn't learn shit about how bitcoin works lol.

Nobody can, that's not how btc works. You'll need to own 51% or more of the network to double spend. And nobody would care about $35 if they owned 51%

Invulner - November 15, 2016, 3:47 am

Andddddddd more stupid people on this forum.

<http://prntscr.com/d7iv9v>

If one could double spend this transaction they would be able to double spend any transaction because they would own 51% of the bitcoin network wich will cost like 400-500m $ investment to do and might not be succesfull.

A double spend is only possible before it has confirmed, or if you own 51%. People really need to look more into btc, it's quite a nice system. Except the 1MB block limit, fuck that shit.

Tell me about it i lost 35 $ cos people dont know what bitcoin is how it works and how to use it.

Dawn? - November 15, 2016, 4:01 am

All transactions get confirmed anyway. People who think sending the smallest amount of transaction fees possible makes the transaction unconfirmable are wrong as well. May take days even weeks but it does get confirmed and I myself have tested it and you can't double spend that way so don't try it folks.

You didn't.

I never scammed anyone and I am NOT going to start now.

1. As I said in the previous thread THIS never happen to me before, so I didn't knew until now (after reading the replies in this thread) how to proceed.
2. You should watch your mouth boy and show more respect.
3. Send me the btc address you want the refund.
