Thread: Allowed to sell physical Amazon Gift Cards.

ailo - November 15, 2016, 11:11 am

So here's what, i usually exchange my Unknown Gift Cards on cardpool and they offer AGC in return and its free shipping and all i need is a shipping address, but the problem is that im not from US, so it wont ship to me, so am i allowed to ask for people's addresses for the shipment of the physical giftcards?

Yes but people generally don't give out their information but may use a PO Box. Apple products however are not allowed.

If they don't mind giving it to you, its not a problem. Its upto them to share their private info with you, if they deem you trustworthy.

Somebody said that buying from wish list won't give their address to you so maybe they could try that one?

As 'TheChief' correctly stated, it's allowed but it comes down to whether if one deems you trusted.

I'd personally just ask for the code in the chat, would save a colossal amount of time and hassle.

Trusting is always an issue for new users like us. If you aren't trusted then don't look toward getting sales. Be HQ is what I have been told and you will get somewhere.
