Thread: Hack Forums News // Weekly Reports

Hydra - November 21, 2016, 12:26 pm

Welcome! If this is your first time here, this thread serves as a gateway for members of the community to submit reports that are newsworthy to the HF News Team (HFNT). We appreciate all reports but there are certain reports that we do not acknowledge in the news. We ask you to please read and follow the guidelines below to assist us efficiently:

Awards

Awards that are not viewable are no longer listed in the news, please do not report them;
HackerCraft Blue will not be listed in the news;
Green and Purple Clover are no longer notable, only report Gold Clover recipients;
Grand Amethyst will be the only exception to donation awards that we will list;
Please report all other awards except Ub3r.

User Stats

Please report post count achievements at 1,000 , 5,000 , 10,000 , 20,000 , 24,000 , and 30,000.
After 30,000, report every 5,000 posts (e.g. 35,000);
Only report reputations at every 1,000 interval: 1,000 , 2,000 , 3,000 , etc.;
Report prestige at every 500 interval: 500 , 1,000 , 1,500 , etc.

Bans and Closures

Please do not report 3-day vacation or marketplace bans;
Please report bans/closures on notable members only (e.g. a troll with 13 posts is not notable).

Groups

Official group related reports only.

Threads

No marketplace product threads;
No self-advertising lounge or discussion threads.

You are allowed to discuss reports in this thread to a limit. Any post that breaks or borderlines an HF rule or I find inappropriate will be junked. Keep it clean and friendly. In addition, please keep discussions to a bare minimum. Although we appreciate interaction within the community, this thread's purpose is for submitting reports. Thank you.

Consider the fact this will be the 3rd award a member can give out themselves throughout all these years HackForums has been active.

It should stay rare.

I'm sure it wouldn't be hard to fix that at all, easiest way I could think of fixing it would be to do `user.postCount -= 1` when the thread is junked so it keeps the post count balanced.

Again it'll probably harder than that to implement just a thought.

Since it took 6 posts to discuss this, let me just clarify it with a single post.

You are not allowed to junk all your threads which have meaning behind them. If you have personal details such as showing off your car and months later you decide to get rid of that, that's fine. However, junking a previous contest, discussion thread, etc.. which have long-term benefit or meaning, there's no reason to do that.

You can technically junk any thread as long as you aren't mass-junking all or most of your threads. It's nonsense.

Same applies to editing posts. What Riyu did is what many have been banned, repkilled, or closed for. Don't mass-edit your threads to get rid of content. You're essentially bypassing the junk limit. On top of that, you're creating LQ threads by editing nonsense into those threads.

Hopefully that clears it up.

tl;dr

Don't junk or post edit your threads in mass quantity, it's LQ and nonsense. You'll be banned, repkilled, and/or closed.

I totally understand this, for SEO reasons and the such, but if a member were to wish to literally purge their existence from the site, I think this is what these members are trying to do, and being it is their OWN postings/account/content, (My personal opinion here) should be able to remove as such if required, even if on request.

I believe where members are being confused is if a specific member chooses to say, blank all their threads for example, they get sanctioned, however if waiting and wiping a thread per day, is acceptable.

Honestly, I am not even clear on this policy.

Also, I don't think Omni minds if the threads are pointless, such as possibly a buyers bay thread for a Netflix account with one reply (this is just what I think), but meaningful threads with a lot of posts on it, I don't think he wants Junked.

The script's function may not have been a bad idea, and Omni probably doesn't disapprove of it because of the additional page request.

The bad idea was making a script to counter functions of a new feature that Omni spent time on making - hence "wasting his f'n time".

Yeah for sure, couldn't see anyone else being Staff, Omni has always wanted to keep staff to a minimum. If an increase in reports over time is the case, not sure if it's sad or good news, good news more people are here? Bad news being that they aren't contributing properly? Or on the bright side, not all warnings/bans are made my intentional rulebreakers.

Anyway, well done to Minimalist and Eagle 95, both are amazing choices for sure.

Well considering he got banned like a week ago, then unbanned to be allowed to continue MOTM now he's banned again. I think he's had his fair share of chances.

There's currently no way of vetting each userscript that's released and Omniscient wouldn't want to handle that on his own. Unless he does create a team or assign a single member to vet each userscript, it makes sense with what he's trying to do. It sucks, but oh well.

Though, there's really no way to prevent userscripts unless he makes the id tags and class tags dynamically change somehow which would break all userscripts that use that (and most do).

I remember when only contests of substantial value or contests that were unique were reported. You're overthinking it. The journalist who does Notable Threads will choose X amount of threads and not 50+. It's notable and allowed to be reported however not all threads will make it in.

There should be a threshold to what's actually notable and what isn't. Ordinary contests isn't notable, that's just my 2 cents. But whatever.

I would assume it's common sense to prioritize $1,000 giveaways over $5 ones. When there isn't $1,000 giveaways, we'll be using anything else to fill in. There already is a threshold per HF policies so if it meets that, it will be notable.

^ This.

From everything I have seen while being in the writers group and the news every week is the largest contests of that current week get the choice pick.

It is ultimately up to the journalists discretion.

This is the section my GF (and the reason I have a matching IP# on my account) has been waiting for.

She rather enjoys the community, but is not technical, shes in to literature, and legal stuff... Sections like this would (IMO) draw in more user base and a broader, hopefully more mature crowd.

Directly, no, My service record has enough awards on it as is.

Indirectly, kinda yes, I think that award is better re-purposed.

I also know, the fact I made the suggestion likely precludes me from that one, but my point stands.

Our Service members should be recognized. Unless they were dishonorably discharged, there is no reason they would not proudly show the documentation to support it.

You think older members know what should and shouldn't be said, yet here we are. Every week I swear I see another member that registered from a couple years back getting banned for the most obvious stuff that isn't allowed. Account age literally doesn't make you a pro at the forums anymore, they're just as bad as new members.

I agree. Time after time again Omni and staff has repeated that they will not get involved. But whats also sad is that none of the staff nor Omni get the recognition they should for dealing with the actual multis and scammers. People think all they do is profit but what they dont' understand is Omni doesn't want people dirtying the waters with scamming either. He does what he wants. This is his business and forum. Don't talk shit about him and don't bother him with shit that he doesn't want to be bothered by Imfao. Simple as that. Not fucking rocket science. lol.

I know more than alot of the members my age it seems. I don't even think I've ever been banned. I've gotten warnings but usually for things that I misunderstood in the rules. Beyond that, if I ever question something, I read the Help Docs. If that doesn't answer it, I post in the Ub3r Support section. That simple. I always have gotten an answer. What about a monitoring team ? Which will be operated by Omni himself. Staff will look after fishy contests and then report to Omni.

Most of the percentage of People will make fake reports to Omni just to get revenge or time waste.

My thing is, like, I've seen the same thread for about two weeks now stay reported but nothing has been done about it. So would I report it to Omni or should I PM staff to have them tell Omni or at least review it? I don't want to waste anyones time which is the reasoning for the question.

I mean the chance of anyone winning top prize was not very big so I don't see why he wouldn't go through with it...

With 300 people entering he had a 0.008% chance of having to give away the $750 prize

It was the small prizes that were going to cost him. 310 unique users picked 1240 numbers. If each of those numbers had a 1/25 chance of winning there would be ~50 expected winning numbers. The 1-match prizes were BTC ($15), L33T ($20), or UB3R ($30). Even if we value a correct match at $20 the expected payout is close to $1K.

Both of these are correct. In the first instance he states he received the award and links the thread he believes led him to receive the award. The second is the more typical way it would be reported in the news.

Regardless, your award will be included in the next edition so don't worry. Next time though please report your award when you receive it as you've had it for about a month now.

Already answered three times in the thread Omni posted. Once you get r3kt, only way to lose is manually if Omni decides to later on.

I'd like to suggest the HF News Team to report R3KT promotions inside User News.

IMO these should occur with a frequency close to 1 per month (if not less), making it a notable achievement.

I will think about it, it would probably go under the first User News section. It would have to be reported though which would cause a lot of unnecessary spam in this thread.

Someone suggested this here already. While it's fairly notable, the list of people being upgraded would be fairly long for each addition as recently someone has been upgraded every 1-3 days. If that starts slowing down and it's only one member per 2-3 weeks I will start including it.

If I ever bought another group I'd probably make it a marketing group though. Except it'd be decent and exclusive to those who wished to educate the marketplace viewers and not "help" the marketplace with "quality" products/services. Like Reviewers with a twist as we wouldn't just cover ebooks nor simply doing reviews.

This is ridiculous. And now some of them are blaming the user they abused for their RKO. Rules involving Scammer reputations are some of the most explicit and basic on the whole site.

I dont get it, I mean I get warnings and shit too, but for good (IMO, epic reasons too) But following the rules is not a hard thing to do, especially when it comes to reputation, scam rep is very clear, only reason you are allowed to make a rep noting a scam is if you LINK the dispute you the rep giver made. People who fail to understand this, sad as it might be (1/8 of these guys is a friend of mine) but its a matter of the rule set, simple as that.

Hopefully the lesson is learned.

I am guessing it is to get others to buy it and make it more valuable so you can rebuy and sell for more than you lost? I'm probably retarded to think that but that's the only thing that would possibly make any sense

SIM-2015410 - May 21, 2017, 1:05 pm

It's basically when you buy a coin for really cheap, and then hype it up heaps on social media, forums, your contacts, etc and start trading big volumes on the exchange so that people think it's the next big thing, they start buying as well and the price spikes rapidly, but you know it's all artificial so you sell all your coins on the spike which means you make a big profit but everyone else loses out because they get stuck with a lot of coins which are in reality worth a lot less than they paid

Different to buy low sell high, because you aren't manipulating the whole market alone basically

Gary - May 21, 2017, 1:07 pm

Okay, I read other peoples post on the thread.

What he meant by the rule is people posting about a random unknown coin and buying it by the thousands making it become an active coin or something which makes people buy it, making the price of the coin go up. Once the coin is up there in price a bit they sell all of it aka dumping it which drops the price.

A pump and dump is a scam originating from the stock market where a group would buy tons of worthless stocks and then entice people to buy into the same stocks telling them it's about to blow up and then dump all of their stocks for a price much higher than what they paid for leaving the rest entirely worthless.

If you invested in some random unknown coin and it skyrocketed wouldn't that then make it a pump and dump coin? I'd be adding fuel to the fire by bragging about it as it results in its value going up to get you more profit. Just don't brag about random coins, discuss coins that actually have a purpose.

Isn't it because it was a straight closure and not a ban? Closed accounts don't get re-opened whereas banned accounts get un banned after the set date. I think that's how it works anyway, could be wrong.
