

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Raymond Reddington - My Testimonial

Raymond Reddington - November 23, 2016, 10:30 am

Raymond Reddington - My Testimonial

November 2013

I first showed up on Hack Forums while looking for tutorials on how to deface websites through 'SQL injection.' Even though I got my answer, I eventually went inactive for a year and a half before coming back sometime in early 2015.

Early 2015's

By now , my interest in this forum piqued and I searched here and there, to see what this forum can offer me and vice versa. Long story short, I got involved in the marketplace, started getting involved with it while maintaining a low profile appearance. Through that, I made a connection of good and dependable friends whom I could count on till this day. That was mainly thanks to my products that was well received by the forum community. From there, I was able to partner with other users on large projects that had a great return on investment. So to say, my time in the Marketplace section was quite lively. ?

Mid 2015's

Well, I guess my friends saw something in me after my performance and one of them decided to give me leadership of their group. During that time, I was a leader of two groups (Debug and Specialists). I was very proud of that moment back then.

August 2015

But with that, my interest in becoming a group owner also increased! It wasn't too long after my financial success in the Marketplace sector that I purchased my first group and branded it as Legends. It's still active, even right now! Even though inactivity plagues me often, I try my best to be a capable leader of my group and help my members wherever I can. My aims with this group is quite high, to tell the truth.

The Now

Its 2016. Well, time flies like an arrow. I don;t stay as active as I used to. I've got a lot of important real life issues to take care of that needs my attention more than HF and its loving members. I log-in after weeks of inactivity, but my goal still remains to inspire other members, what they are today and what they can become tomorrow. Its all about patience, perseverance and focus.

Concluding Lines

If it weren't for Hack Forums' rigorous and unpredictable community, I would have never toughened and be in the position I am today. It is thanks to everyone in this community that I am what I am today. With the support, resilience and feedback offered by everyone, I am now successful and head strong with a clear goal for my future.

Once again, a big thank you to Hack Forums for making it all happen. And thank you for reading this thread, dear stranger!

~Raymond Reddington ?

h3ll0_fr13nd - October 4, 2026, 1:20 am

I've just read your 3 threads about dorking, the best tut that I've ever read, thank you !

- I hope you're still doing good -