Either their AV's detect it as the crypter is really popular in my opinion or some of your settings are wrong.

Have you extensively checked your rat with the crypter to make sure it's not corrupt and functionally correctly. Had many times that the crypter had issues with errors or corruption. ?

I sent you a PM offering to help you and you didn't respond

Quote:Can you answer a few questions for me:

1. Is the client binary still running on the VPS, or is it closing after some time?
2. Does restarting LuminosityLink make the clients reconnect?

This will help me, although I haven't found any issues whatsoever, and even offered a monetary reward for steps to replicate the issue, in which nobody replied.

I also offered TeamViewer support to resolve the issue and you never responded.

I also offered TeamViewer support to resolve the issue and you never responded. I think it's an issue with the crypter. Luminosity Link is working fine, the only issue i have is that you cannot have it running for long in a virtual machine. Running windows 7 x64. Don't know if this is due to having a vpn running and it loses a connection Luminosity will terminate or it just crashes on it own.

Going to leave it alone and see the results tomorrow. ?

Also dont use AES encryption with cyberseal... Unless he has fixed it it corrupts your LL stub. Other methods work fine.

Barys detection means that you need to put a good assembly info and a HQ icon to the executable.

Open the crypting spoiler, follow the instructions from there.

Getting Cyber-seal FUD is like having to ask a girl out only to send her 1000$ to go out with you .
And then only having to dump you by the time you pay for dinner.

Thats Cyberseal!
