Thread: I hypothetically got scammed

Prophet Banana - December 1, 2016, 6:28 am

Hello I am a millennial retard with strict liberal values. I never judge a person by race, religion, or appearance. So when a newly registered user with 5 reps asked me to go first in a $500 currency exchange, I said no problem.

I got scammed shortly after.

ChaoticForce - December 1, 2016, 6:29 am

Did he chargeback? PM me I can help you

JoshuTee - December 1, 2016, 6:29 am

You shouldn't judge a user by his rep or creation date, so you did everything right.
Sorry for that man. Hope you get it resolved

What a misfortune fellow member. Here I will express my concerns for your lack of better judgement but also apologise personally for your loss. I sincerely hope but not truly believe your issue becomes resolved.

You posted this as a reply somewhere else, and now you make a thread.

This is 100% the first thing i thought about when i read the thread " 'You're Not Upgrade Bro' "
if you don't trust someone who seems sketchy af then you're a biggot that hates everyone.

There are females here? Or. . . better not think about It

Kisame? - December 1, 2016, 6:33 am

He told me he did big transactions before and he also said he was trusted on leakforums... I think we're scammed by the same guy op!

Yet people with large amounts of rep still scam. Take for example, the infamous Anonymous.
I'm not disagreeing with you, obviously a new member has a lot less to lose, but if you just blindly trust people with lots of rep you can still end up scammed.

stupidsexyflanders - December 1, 2016, 6:54 am always have to be careful on the internet, even if someone has good rep, doesn't mean there isn't a chance of being scammed. you always have to watch out for yourself. I got scammed by someone with really good rep but I guess he wanted to stop being legit since I wasn't the only one :(
