

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Allow members to move their own threads within the section

'Ben - December 2, 2016, 3:58 am

Every now and then we all make a thread in the wrong section. Id imagine members of staff get plenty of messages daily asking for threads to be moved.

How about allowing members to move their own threads within the section, for example; If I post in the Deal dispute section but really it was supposed to go in the Secondary sellers area, I could just move it.

Instead of deleting the thread OR PMing a member of staff.

When I say section I mean you couldn't take a thread from Graphics and move it to Gaming, only the categories that fall under that tab.

Now it won't eliminate the problem entirely but it would cut down on it a lot.

Of course you would have to put some kind of restriction on it, perhaps Leet+, certain amount of posts, etc..

Now I don't make sites, I don't know it's possible, could even be too much work for little gain.

Just an idea, be gentle ?

M?xim - December 2, 2016, 4:37 am

I feel like that power should stay with staffs. If someone posts in the wrong section, report it and it's taken care of.

'Ben - December 2, 2016, 4:39 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:37 AM)M?xim Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I feel like that power should stay with staffs. If someone posts in the wrong section, report it and it's taken care of.

I'm talking about your own threads, not anyone else's, that would be stupid.

Sam Sepiol - December 2, 2016, 4:42 am

Report button would become useless, so it's a no no.

Vitani - December 2, 2016, 4:43 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:37 AM)M?xim Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I feel like that power should stay with staffs. If someone posts in the wrong section, report it and it's taken care of.

I agree with Maxim. This would get abused by users who want to create chaos.

Just look at the morchid incident, and you'll know why this is a bad idea. Even mentors can't move threads (anymore).

sHAY - December 2, 2016, 4:44 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:42 AM)Sam Sepiol Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Report button would become useless, so it's a no no.

No? There are more report options.

OT: I think it would be a cool idea, maybe have a cooldown on it tho so people don't just move threads all the time. Not sure if it will be added

Motusora - December 2, 2016, 4:45 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:43 AM)Vitani Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I agree with Maxim. This would get abused by users who want to create chaos.

Just look at the morchid incident, and you'll know why this is a bad idea. Even mentors can't move threads (anymore).

i dont have any idea how it can create more chaos .

'Ben - December 2, 2016, 4:45 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:42 AM)Sam Sepiol Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Report button would become useless, so it's a no no.

1: There are plenty of reasons to report 2: You say that like it would be a bad thing?

(Dec 2, 2016 05:43 AM)Vitani Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I agree with Maxim. This would get abused by users who want to create chaos.

Just look at the morchid incident, and you'll know why this is a bad idea. Even mentors can't move threads (anymore).

Move YOUR own threads, he was moving any and everything.

Put a limit on, something like 1 every 24 hours same as junking threads. If you post constantly in the wrong section(s) you're trolling/doing it on purpose.

Eagle 95 - December 2, 2016, 4:49 am

By understanding how HF works and what sections it has, you can post your thread in the correct section 99% of the time. If by any means you make a mistake, you can always PM a staff member to move your thread. They'll gladly do it.

So no, I don't agree with this suggestion.

'Ben - December 2, 2016, 4:53 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:49 AM)Eagle 95 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) By understanding how HF works and what sections it has, you can post your thread in the correct section 99% of the time. If by any means you make a mistake, you can always PM a staff member to move your thread. They'll gladly do it.

So no, I don't agree with this suggestion.

I agree, as I said it's only now and then it happens just because lack of attention.

Staff are very helpful no denying that

I think it would just make it easier for everyone but I can see some perfectly valid points being made

Just a suggestion ?

LastSession - December 2, 2016, 4:55 am

When you implement something like that it should be for Ub3rs only and that you can move your thread just one time.

Prince™ - December 2, 2016, 5:12 am

Nope I think it's fine with the way that moving perms are with staffs.

M?xim - December 2, 2016, 5:16 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:39 AM)Ben??? Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm talking about your own threads, not anyone else's, that would be stupid.

Still. Feel like that power should remain for staffs only. I don't see how people can accidentally post in the wrong section.

SumoWrestler - December 2, 2016, 5:16 am

Just post in the right section lol

Vitani - December 2, 2016, 5:16 am

(Dec 2, 2016 05:45 AM)Ben??? Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Move YOUR own threads, he was moving any and everything.

Put a limit on, something like 1 every 24 hours same as junking threads. If you post constantly in the wrong section(s) you're trolling/doing it on purpose.

Still, when you are moving your own threads (trolling threads) just to create chaos and such it could be seen as abuse.

1 move a day would fix this, but that does not really make this a good idea.

Right now the system works, no need to change it right?

LastSession - December 2, 2016, 5:17 am

(Dec 2, 2016 06:16 AM)Vitani Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Still, when you are moving your own threads (trolling threads) just to create chaos and such it could be seen as abuse.

1 move a day would fix this, but that does not really make this a good idea.

Right now the system works, no need to change it right?

One move a thread would be much better.

Mr.Peanut - December 2, 2016, 5:19 am

Honestly I would support this if this were for Ubers. This would reduce requests sent to staff. It'd be the OPs thread only. If a user wants to post in the wrong section, he/she can do so already without moving a thread right? If it's moved to the wrong section, it can always be reported.

I think this is an efficient idea.

Torc - December 3, 2016, 10:10 pm

(Dec 2, 2016 04:58 AM)Ben??? Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Every now and then we all make a thread in the wrong section. Id imagine members of staff get plenty of messages daily asking for threads to be moved.

How about allowing members to move their own threads within the section, for example; If I post in the Deal dispute section but really it was supposed to go in the Secondary sellers area, I could just move it.

Instead of deleting the thread OR PMing a member of staff.

When I say section I mean you couldn't take a thread from Graphics and move it to Gaming, only the categories that fall under that tab.

Now it won't eliminate the problem entirely but it would cut down on it a lot.

Of course you would have to put some kind of restriction on it, perhaps Leet+, certain amount of posts, etc..

Now I don't make sites, I don't know it's possible, could even be too much work for little gain.

Just an idea, be gentle ?You can just full edit your post, copy the code/text, and paste it in a new thread and retitled your thread as "wrong section, sorry".

Sajuuk - December 3, 2016, 11:12 pm

(Dec 3, 2016 11:10 PM)Torc Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You can just full edit your post, copy the code/text, and paste it in a new thread and retitled your thread as "wrong section, sorry".

Heh, yeah: "give us more privileges because I can't post my shit in the right section." :)))

The exploit would involve the accident play. "Ouh, I moved the thread from Rules and Announcements to Premium Sellers because I accidentally posted it in that section" as if that wasn't a big enough jump.

perm - December 3, 2016, 11:19 pm

Just junk your thread and create it in the right section.

Regulus - December 3, 2016, 11:41 pm

Kind of a cool idea but I feel like this would fit only to the upgraded members.

Since normal members would tend to create chaos as someone else mentioned.

Night Fury - December 3, 2016, 11:42 pm

(Dec 3, 2016 11:48 PM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) One time, mentors could do this.

ONE mentor went rogue and we all lost this privilege.

There is no way in hell Omni would do this without some major restrictions.

I was online that day. Man, I felt so helpless watching some guy destroy the site and knowing that we couldn't do anything about it. I was constantly refreshing to see when a staff member would come on, but luck had it that they were all offline for what seemed to be an eternity. What a shame that particular mentor went rogue. Especially after playing such a large role in the forum, it's disgusting he chose to burn the community that only supported him.

OT: People should just be mindful of where they're posting. You're saying, "what if I make a mistake?" Well, what if you make a mistake when move your thread? What if you move your Innuendo thread to SRPP on accident? Then what do you do?

Omniscient - December 4, 2016, 2:04 pm

Sorry but no. Ub3r can junk the thread and create a new one.