Thread: I feel as though the reason we where put on this earth is to be famous think about it if you have never thought about it Pewdiepie has a 50 million fanbase so when he dies there is going to be alot of remembrance for him and alot of upset fans and it would be a total disaster that will upset all of us same goes for markiplier and every other big youtuber when They pass away They will always be remembered now think about it this is what makes me sad.

people with no fanbase won't be remembered will they? people who have never done youtube if something happened to them no one would even no and there just forgotten where as everyone talks about famous people dying when someone with no fanbase dies who's goanna remember you?

exactly no one its really upsetting just gone and forgotten thats what happens to none famous people its not fair ?

Yeah but then you have your family who remembers your friends people in your area we just have to accept the things we have everyone wants to be famous but if its not working whats the point in always trying?

People who want to be famous for the sake of being famous are just people that lack enough talent to be known for anything of value. IMO. They are a cancer of modern society.

Being famous and successful just means you have more access to more shit that makes your shit life even shitter because it's hard to find shit to beat the last shit you did and ultimately you end up in the shit because your life just becomes increasingly more shit because you can't find progressively more better shit to do.

Knowing this shit is what makes my shit life less shit so I just carry on doing the same shit that my normal shitty life has to offer. Occasionally I come across some really nice shit that makes my shit life abit less shitty, then ultimately my shit life returns to it's intrinsical value of:
SHIT.

Humans don't have any reason to exist at all, we're just a product of evolution which is completely random Evolution is at the very absolute opposite end of the scale to random. Things evolve to survive and better fit the environment they live in. Nothing random about it.

No problem everyone's life becomes shit at some point, it's just a matter of time till one of us steps in shit.
