

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Does reading about suicide get to anybody else?

BR?ND?N - December 11, 2016, 10:41 pm

After reading about Tate, it just got me really depressed man. I didn't even know the guy but I feel some weird connection to him by reading about that. He was just some average kid. 17 man. That's my age. I'm 17.

A few years ago I was having suicidal thoughts. I'd be lying if I said I don't still have them. A few HF members know. However when I read shit like that, it's the reason I push those thoughts away and disregard them as edgy bullshit.

Maybe it's weird to get emotional reading about the death of someone I didn't even know. Most people would probably go "that's sad" and move on. However it just depresses the shit out of me. Poor guy had a whole life ahead of him :/

Arixs - December 11, 2016, 10:43 pm

Doesn't really mess with me in the way your talking about, just kinda makes me sad and shit.

SIM-3257834 - December 11, 2016, 10:44 pm

Sounds like someone can easily influenced, might want to avoid stories involving mass shooters.

Velo - December 11, 2016, 10:47 pm

If I am sad or down, I look to Cringe Videos for comfort.
They even helped my down syndrome.

BR?ND?N - December 11, 2016, 10:49 pm

(Dec 11, 2016 11:46 PM).Lowkey Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Have them everyday.

I always wonder,

"Is it worth it to keep working for seemingly un-attainable dreams?"

"Do I really want to work 9-5 and survive on the bare minimum?"

Don't have many friends and it hurts a little bit every time I check my phone and there isn't anyone checking up on me, nobody I can talk to about my problems, nothing.

It really hurts bro, I wonder every second if it's worth it in the back of my mind.

I love you

(Dec 11, 2016 11:44 PM)Ahri. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Sounds like someone can easily influenced, might want to avoid stories involving mass shooters.

Easily influenced?NAH!

I willingly joined 27 cults.

including the blue oyster cult

Amp - December 11, 2016, 10:52 pm

It depressed me, only because I can relate. My uncle passed to suicide in July so it hits close to home even reading about it.

Life is beautiful, it's sad that some people aren't around to see it.

Trappy - December 11, 2016, 10:56 pm

Yeah hearing about Tate got me in my feels recently too, had no clue who he was and wasn't around here when it happened still crazy that a 17 year old killed himself, live on tinychat.

Sadistic - December 11, 2016, 10:57 pm

Yes

#freemyhomietate2k16

/thread