Thread: Free Condoms At Anime Fan Event!

phunted - December 15, 2016, 3:57 am

I found this amusing.

Wouldn't surprise me how many people will attend just for the free protection.

Quote:Attendees at this month's otaku gathering can get their hands on not just art books and posters, but limited-edition prophylactics too.

One could argue that for a long stretch of history, otaku had a built-in, practically bullet-proof method of protection against unwanted pregnancies and sexually transmitted diseases: being otaku. For many years, Japan's manga and anime fan communities were overwhelmingly male and alarmingly unbathed, with the collective effect being a heavy reduction on their chances for sexual encounters.

Over the last few years, though, Japanese fandom has become increasingly gender-balanced and socially connected, to the extent that otaku-centric matchmaking services have even begun popping up. So with those changes to the dating landscape, it makes a certain kind of sense that at the upcoming Comiket, Japan's largest gathering of independent comic and anime-style art creators, one booth will be handing out free condoms.

This has been everywhere, It's basically viral.

I feel like credit doesn't really need to be give when I am not contributing anything.

Just sharing, edited with source link to make you happy.
