Why the fuck do uk jobs pay shit money.
20k a year dafuq? are u having a laugh or something.

Anyways i decided to ask HF. anyone know of any good professions or jobs in the UK. If so LMK as always will be appreciated :)

UK jobs are always shit.

You have to be in a management role or have many years experience in a trade to earn more than 20k

Electricians make quite a lot and people always need electricians, and being self employed is always a good idea, like if its just fixing broken iPhones and shit would make you quite a bit, number 1 because its easy and number 2 because like everyone uses iPhones

Sorry to gravedig but jobs in the UK are so shit lmao, you'd want to look for one in IT, or self employment if you know how

Not sure if this is something you were really looking for. However, I recently had a talk with a person from the

RAF. He said if you were to be a pilot, like for the helicopters and stuff, you can be earning anywhere from £30k to £100k. Also, being in the RAF would mean you pay less for your housing and other things, basically all you have to really pay for is a car and your phone. Free food and housing, or at least very cheap housing anyway.

So again, i'm not really sure if you would be into something like that. But if not, cyber type jobs pay a lot these days? Like a technician or something.

After graduating from Uni with a degree in computing 6 months later here I am still without a job. UK jobs are so shit they expect 10 years experience by the age of 21 these days.

I have family in the UK and they informed me that the only way to earn an above average living is to work in IT.
