

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: [\[NEW\] Web design attempt \[SH\]](#)

AlCapone. - December 19, 2016, 4:27 pm

Hey again guys,

I've been messing around for the past hour just putting together some simple minimalistic designs and have came up with this for my website, its a work in progress as is much of my work that gets posted I never get time to finish any of it.

Nevertheless here it is.

<https://imgur.com/a/yIK8n>

All feedback welcome, good and bad...dont worry about being harsh hahah, if you would also like the check out my Instagram

https://www.instagram.com/sandhustle_ /

Sasori - December 19, 2016, 4:36 pm

Looks like a poorly made thread design.

?now - December 19, 2016, 4:41 pm

Looks really good tbh. The text at the top looks a little bit fucked (thinness/size just kinda looks awkward) everything else looks sick op

NineTheGhoul - December 19, 2016, 6:04 pm

Great Design, OP!

For some reason the green/blue logo at the top is sort of throwing off the symmetry

maybe it's too far to the right or my eyes are just playing tricks on me lol

other than that, really solid piece! <3

.Astro - December 19, 2016, 10:54 pm

It's not so bad but it isn't so good either.

I'm not the biggest fan of how skinny and tall it feels. It's probably the fonts chosen, but it looks like it's all squished together. If that was what you are going for then I suppose it's fine but it just feels all too congested. I'm not too sure why there is such a huge space on the right side? And the alignment is all weird. Try using a program such as GuideGuide or create your own smart guides easily so that way everything stays aligned nicely. I would also make the font / text size all smaller in general. When zoomed in, it looks too big. You should really work on your typography and perhaps take a look at some other web designs to get a better idea on how to design yours.