So I just finished the anime usagi drop today and I must say it was a welcome change of pace to what I usually watch. Before watching it I grumbled when I started watching kimi ni todoke as its so slow and the characters piss me off but I wanna watch more first world problems

Agree on Kimi ni Todoke being slow as shit. I was so happy when I finished the series and I'm glad I watched it, but I doubt I'll ever rewatch it. As for Usagi Drop, it's a very heart warming story, one of my favorites. A lot of people complain that the ending of the manga ruins the series reputation and I can understand why they say that, but for me it's still a warm and comforting series.
