Thread: What to do if a member doesn't pay after I completed his request?

undefined. - December 27, 2016, 3:33 pm

Yeah so I'm offering my coding service on the premium seller section. A member PM'ed me to make a bot, but because he seemed to be trusted, I haven't take any payment upfront.

Now after I completed the bot he want, he doesn't even reply to my skype or PM.(he read it for sure)

Any advice on what to do??

Make a detailed scam report to warn the community.

He scammed you for certain, make a deal dispute and maybe he'll pay you, he'll likely get his account closed as well.

Tell them you'll be opening a scam report soon if they don't resolve this. If they once again don't reply just make a detailed one to save other members from being scammed too.

Since you haven't given him it he could've just changed his mind? tbh who knows. He could just be busy then?

Nope. He read my PM and even have time to bump his thread. I completed his request within +- 24 hours

I don't think you can do anything without waiting it out.

If you haven't gave it away, you could save it for future reference.

Unless you know his address, you cannot slap him in the face.

You could make a community report I think, I understand that he wasted your effort but I don't know if it is suitable for a scam report.

Can you pm me what kind of bot you made for him?

Lovely? - December 27, 2016, 3:41 pm

PM me the bot details and if its juicy I'll buy it myself :)

I never knew this could be referred to as 'Scam'. Agree with OP, he wasted your time.

Can I open a community alert? Just to make sure that other people won't be treated like this

Seeing the response before, I will make a community alert soon. Thanks
