Thread: Here We Create | Game Design/Coding/Music/Graphics | Growing Community

Long Story - January 5, 2017, 12:58 pm

Now that I got you too click on the thread, maybe you can help out by signing-up? Doesn't take long, and I promise you will not regret it!

Here we create is searching for new members too join the community.

We are looking for people who are interested in coding/game design/music/graphics and much more.

The here we create forum will house community tutorials and questions on each section mentioned above.

If you want too learn coding, than there is a section for that.

I am currently looking for suggestions on the website, and what I can do to improve it. Thanks everyone!

As a new forum, I will suggest you create less number of sections.

After your forums grows, move them to new forums related to your requirements.

With seven tabs, I can only assume that you totally ignored Verilog's suggestion, the only post on this advertisement. I say that I can only assume because upon clicking any of the tabs no forums, subforums, or sections appear and when you try to return to 'General' that disappears too. I registered just to see if this was a Guest issue, it's not. You've got a long ways to go.

My biggest suggestion is to get a better logo that doesn't remind me of the Easter Bunny's eggs. Limit your sections. Get a better theme. A lot more.

Hahaha, the easter eggs. Ya, I'm paying someone too make one. Also, I noticed that problem last night where registered members can't view the forum tabs. I will get my coder to fix it.

I just made this thread to get people on it. Usually helps with finding bugs.

He already made one of these threads and I commented on the ridiculous amount of sections he had, was something like 40+.

Just ignored everyone else and locked the thread.

Just leave him to it, forum wont be around for long.

There was 23 lol. I have tabs now, keeping it more organized. Keep off my thread with the asinine remarks. Help me out instead of bashing me. You tool. People have too learn and start somewhere, go choke on air.
