Thread: Youre being tracked!

Mik4B1t - January 9, 2017, 10:10 pm

Yup, you might know this already but google maps have been tracking you. I can say this with proof though. Check what they have on you!

maps.google.com/locationhistory/b/0

How to disable it?

To check if your location history is enabled go to the google maps location history page and click the gear-icon for your settings. Disable or enable the service there. If you disable the feature please note that this will not delete your current history.

To do that you'll need to activate the pull down menu which is below the calendar on the left. Below the calendar you will see options to delete your history from the time period you have chosen or to delete all of your history.

Lyrlei - January 9, 2017, 10:17 pm

It's okay. I want google to stalk me plenty.

Mik4B1t - January 9, 2017, 10:18 pm

EDIT: This is different for a computer. To delete your history from a PC you'll need to click the trash bin icon in the lower right corner, the settings can be seen there as-well. The gear icon.

Revits - January 9, 2017, 10:18 pm

It's kinda obv, it knows your location when you search to bring you the best options near you

Mr. Corleone - January 9, 2017, 10:19 pm

I have my phone with me whenever I got to school or work or do groceries.

When I go out on a murder spree I leave it at home.

This way, if I ever become a suspect, the police can look at my phone and see that I was home that night.

Always works.

Yeah, location services can help. Although not required half the time. Each to their own I guess.

Then they see this post and you end up getting anally raped in prison.

?Ñåzg?l - January 9, 2017, 11:12 pm

well just wait a second before disabling it google maps tracks you for traffic data

so when you are driving, google maps tracks how fast your car is going in order to know if there is a traffic jam somewhere so if your car is moving slow it will compare data with other cars and assume there is a traffic jam there and you can look online on google maps to see where traffic jams are located in a city this function is really useful for a lot of people especially in big city's so I would keep it on

SIM-3420445 - January 9, 2017, 11:43 pm

There is another way as well, you can login to your account and disable / pause search history. Thanks for the information tho OP thrudda - January 10, 2017, 1:19 am

I am pretty sure not only you location is being tracked, there are some apps like FB that are constantly listening to your conversations.

moosa666 - January 10, 2017, 1:25 am

lol you must be trolling lol how else do you want to use google maps gps

DotGlass - January 10, 2017, 1:28 am

If you're extremely paranoid is normal you want to disable it but dude, how then you will use the GPS, or locate your phone if get stolen/loss?

undefined. - January 10, 2017, 6:41 am

Well privacy is basically dead. Youtube, facebook, etc uses persistent cookies, they track what you did on the internet. How can adsense/adwords can be so targeted if they don't keep a history of us

Caliban - January 10, 2017, 6:50 am

It says its disabled

Anyways i dont care too much

Capwin - January 10, 2017, 6:56 am

A lot of people don't like being tracked but I could honestly care less.

Korvo - January 10, 2017, 7:00 am

Interesting share, I'm sure not everyone knows that they store your location history. It sucks, but it is what it is. Thanks for the share man.

Unluckily for Google, maps or otherwise, even I don't know who I am. I believe the safest place to be is somewhere between lost and insanity.

Yup digging further today I found the same info. Breach of privacy if you ask me. How is capturing voice data beneficial to anything legitimate. Whats app seems to be the way to go, at least they encrypt messages. Not sure about voice though.

It didn't say shit for me, I had location history disabled, don't know if that does anything though, obviously they would be tracking us, and what we are doing, lol.

Yup location history is the option that they rely on. At least we have an option to turn it off and they actually do notify of us of this. As a member posted, it can be good for some things. GPS for instance. Or if you play pokemon go or other such games that rely on location services. I personally use location services for g-mon thats about it.

No problem and your right, it is what it is. Some people rely heavily on it. I guess it all depends on ones needs. :)
