When I visit that link I get this weird error instead of the thread doesn't exist page
Quote:Gone

I mean, the error message kind of tells you? where did you find the thread?

Lucifer's Inferno - January 11, 2017, 1:55 pm

Yeah I get the same error. The thread doesn't exist, I assume that's why.

If you change around the tid to a random number, you'll get the same error.

?ndrew - January 11, 2017, 1:55 pm

spooky, what was that thread anyways?

testpen101 - January 11, 2017, 1:56 pm

That was my thread guys, I had it removed.

Ainaj - January 11, 2017, 1:57 pm

Yeah I know it's because it doesn't exist, but there was a "thread doesn't exist" page before, and it's not working anymore

Bluffer - January 11, 2017, 1:57 pm

When I got bored a couple weeks ago I was just trying random thread id urls and had this error, it means it was deleted or doesn't exist im pretty sure.

SoulZeh - January 11, 2017, 1:58 pm

The error message pretty much tells us that anyway?

It doesn't exist. Just put the tid to anything and you get the same error.

I don't need 50 people saying the same thing. I posted this so Omni can see that the error page isn't showing the correct page. I know the thread doesn't exist!

(Maybe it's intentional)

Omniscient - January 11, 2017, 2:34 pm

A 410 error for a non-existing page is the correct error for SEO. I intentionally changed it a couple month ago.
