

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Universal Profile Ignore

Closed User - January 13, 2017, 2:45 pm

You can't visit their profile to get a trustscan, you have to find a post made by that person

Example: <https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=2518836>

Would be great if you added a TS hyperlink :)

J?son - January 13, 2017, 2:47 pm

<https://hackforums.net/trustscan.php?uid=UID>

theres ur button

Closed User - January 13, 2017, 2:48 pm

(Jan 13, 2017 03:47 PM)Jas?n Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) <https://hackforums.net/trustscan.php?uid=UID>

theres ur button

Trustscan is more usefull to newcomers I'd assume, doubt they would figure that one out

M?xim - January 13, 2017, 3:50 pm

(Jan 13, 2017 04:49 PM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If only there was a userscript to do this.... lol
Oh man.

?-? ??? ????? - January 13, 2017, 3:51 pm

Lol wtf I didn't even know this was a feature...

FamousHater - January 13, 2017, 3:52 pm

(Jan 13, 2017 04:49 PM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If only there was a userscript to do this.... lol lets not tempt u into that.. adam

James Burnham - January 13, 2017, 3:56 pm

TS=Trustscan

Elitas - January 13, 2017, 4:02 pm

(Jan 13, 2017 04:56 PM)Mr. Burnham Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#)

TS=Trustscan

Hence why he said you have to find a post they made to do this.

But either way OP, TS is for dealing with people. I'd assume those with universal ignore, will not be dealing with you anyway.

Bluffer - January 15, 2017, 11:03 pm

A lot of HF users are too lazy to copy paste the UID into their address bar to view a user's trust scan.

While that may say something about their stupidity, it's also helping scammers not be held accountable for their actions.

I really hope this is added to THIS page.

Armada - January 16, 2017, 12:28 am

To be totally honest, I find this global ignore thing rather, well simply annoying.

This is a public CLEAR NET forum. Simply dont post shit you do not want displayed on your profile, problem solved.

Stupid additions being added instead of core upgrades... waste of time IMO. But what the holy fuck do I know right? lol dez.py - January 16, 2017, 2:56 am i think it's good sometimes but yeah good post

Themis - January 16, 2017, 3:01 am

it seems like a nice idea, but i think the universal profile mostly used for scammers:)

Light - January 16, 2017, 8:43 am

Just found about this today when I saw -Sam- profile had this and I went to do some research, I find this to be obnoxious to have enabled.

(?°?)?(???? - January 16, 2017, 9:58 am

(Jan 16, 2017 10:52 AM)- Sam - Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I know I posted this earlier but for some reason the member junked the entire thread.

At first I thought this feature was somewhat good but now I have changed my mind. I find it incredibly annoying, especially when you try to visit an old friends profile every so often to see their account activity only to find out you can't.

I understand the whole concept of such a feature is to prevent stalking but for what reason? I have recently come across a member who is exit scamming and he has enabled this feature aswell as disabling his private messages.

The only way I can see the members content is to do the old trick of copy and pasting links and editing the UID to access the appropriate pages.

My point being is a member who is intentionally scamming can block off all contact with other members by enabling this feature aswell as disabling his private messages. Sure the reputation of the user is still visible but you and I both know members fail to even look at a members reputation before doing a marketplace deal. Usually nowadays it's down to the generosity of other members who post warning about a specific member.

I completely agree with this.

Light - January 16, 2017, 10:02 am

(Jan 16, 2017 10:52 AM)- Sam - Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I know I posted this earlier but for some reason the member junked the entire thread.

At first I thought this feature was somewhat good but now I have changed my mind. I find it incredibly annoying, especially when you try to visit an old friends profile every so often to see their account activity only to find out you can't.

I understand the whole concept of such a feature is to prevent stalking but for what reason? I have recently come across a member who is exit scamming and he has enabled this feature aswell as disabling his private messages.

The only way I can see the members content is to do the old trick of copy and pasting links and editing the UID to access the appropriate pages.

My point being is a member who is intentionally scamming can block off all contact with other members by enabling this feature aswell as disabling his private messages. Sure the reputation of the user is still visible but you and I both know members fail to even look at a members reputation before doing a marketplace deal. Usually nowadays it's down to the generosity of other members who post warning about a specific member.

You pissed me off so much when trying to view your profile making me come here and write about it, pls turn off or add to buddy list ?

Omniscient - January 16, 2017, 10:54 am

Quote:A lot of HF users are too lazy to copy paste the UID into their address bar to view a user's trust scan.

Laziness is not my problem. Trust Scan allows you to search by either UID or username.

Also, I wanted to use this simple feature to test reaction to profile privacy. As I suspected, members don't actually want it.

Feature is removed.