Wakka - January 17, 2017, 12:45 am

So recently two members made fake deal disputes against me, obviously, it is going to impede on my ability to deal effectively on the forums so I'm considering creating a RS gold selling website instead.

Do you think it's a worthwhile venture? Or too much competition?

ChaoticForce - January 17, 2017, 12:48 am

Too much competition definitely,

SIM-2502833 - January 17, 2017, 12:48 am

Honestly neither side of those disputes has literally any proof except that they can prove they sent funds. They can't prove you didn't send them and you can't prove you did send them. It's ridiculous.

SIM-3257834 - January 17, 2017, 12:49 am

I think 2 reports on you is enough to call you guilty.

Yeah... It's a shit position to be in. There is literally nothing I can do to clear my name except comply with them because they are basically blackmailing me, give them $250 and they remove the deal dispute which obviously I'm not going to be doing cause I'm not a pushover.

I'm not saying you're innocent.

I'm also not saying you're guilty. Both sides have fishy shit going on.

I'd like to ask you the same thing.

Both scam reports, no attempt to middle man.

Both scam reports, in like an hour window when he barely gets customers in such a small time frame.

Both customers probably knew he wouldn't record it.

On the other side of things.

The wakka kid trips up on the deal disputes like twice.

WHy would he not sell his bow for the first guy who wanted more than 200 mil?

Can't remember RSN.

Doesn't record transaction.

Now, I'm the retard because I don't immediately take someone's side? I kept up with these scam reports and I was unable to take a side, which I normally would have done.

Sadly a lot of people don't realise how the real world works, they don't know about the sharks, snakes and wolves in sheep's clothing.

I don't know what to believe. Framing a person is not impossible. But framing your victims as blackmailers isn't impossible either. Only time can prove who does legit business and who likes scamming. By the way, how do you acquire that gold?

A lot of it I earn in game through:

Botting
Luring
Bossing
High risk pking

Most of it is usually gold that I resell.

James Burnham - January 17, 2017, 1:03 am

What is luring? Something like hacking an account and transferring its items?

I used my friends to social engineer the fuck out of people / companies and get funds in return sometimes too but hackforums is an exception

Basically, you make people lose their items through false trust.

Runescape is just a past-time though, I do a lot of other 'questionable' and somewhat unethical shit too.

I never once said I was a nice person in regards to my RuneScape activities henceforth, that is irrelevant. I know a lot of white hat ways to make money sadly white hat does not interest me all that much I'd rather dabble in the grey and occasionally play with fire in the black.

I wouldn't be surprised a thick headed person like yourself would hop on the bandwagon...

?Blastonic - January 17, 2017, 1:47 am there will be much competition but if you do it right you'll definitely generate profit as long as you put a dick ton of work into it, or you could invest in gambling and ruin ur life (or make it 10x better) ur call

This but Wakka also can't prove he did send the gold either. Wakka can't you screenshot your transaction history I don't play that game so I don't know if that's a feature.

And I don't see why you've jumped on the bandwagon of defending him, he has no proof of sending the payments yet both the deal disputes have evidence of them sending the BTC.

Not taking sides but currently it looks a lot worse for Wakka.

Yes dredd... but you have to put in consideration of them trying to fuck him over they could of spent a little to make it seem like they didnt receive anything thrudda - January 17, 2017, 2:45 am

There's already so many seller of RS gold, no harm trying if you have the passion

Same could be said for Wakka he's shown nothing to prove he sent them the funds... At least they proved they sent the funds.

Let me break it down in Layman's terms.

Claimants have both shown proof of payment.

Defendant (Wakka has shown no proof of sending the gold)

It's not really the claimants job to prove they received the gold this is something Wakka should prove and he's yet to do so.

As you can clearly see the evidence so far is pointing towards Wakka being the guilty one.

I presume this game has some sort of transaction history why can't he just screenshot that, unless he didn't actually send the funds....

It seems you've already sided with Wakka.

Wakka - January 17, 2017, 11:12 am

Wakka is now happy and justice has been served, I think the sales trashing will stop now and it looks like I don't have to make that website after all :)
