Quote:What if you hold the power to hear the voices or see fragments of images from the future? Would that be a good thing or a bad thing? Glasslip follows the life of Touko Fukami, an aspiring glass artist born from a glass artisan family. She enjoys her worry-free life in Fukui, save for the fragments of images that she sees on occasion.

On her 18th summer, she meets the transfer student Kakeru Okikura at her school, and then again at her favorite café called Kazemichi together with all four of her friends. The voices from the future lead Kakeru to Touko, and his arrival disrupts her mediocre existence. All six of the friends must face their most unforgettable summer full of hope, affection, and heartache.

(10/10 opening song, so soothing...)

Season(s): 1

Episode(s): 13

Genre(s): Romance, Slice of Life, Supernatural

A lot of people dropped the show before Episode 4-5 I think, but this is where it starts in my opinion. Yes it is slow paced, and yes it can appear confusing, but the romance is really cute in my opinion, and so are the interactions between the characters. I originally watched it because the art style was good, but I got more into it and ended up loving the show overall.

Glasslip is like Seinfeld, except literally nothing happens. It's a shame, the art was really pretty.

I'll look for other Shoujo, Slice of Life, Romance, etc. Anime with art like that.

It's 50/50. I can't tell you I understood all of it. The side characters aren't really involved within the main plot as well.
