juvi.pw - January 31, 2017, 3:58 am

The only current gun I own is a Glock 26 gen4 subcompact 9mm and I LOVE it, Glock is probably the only brand I'll go with.

I also have a Viridian R5 green laser on it, sorry for all the picture but here's some pics, and some videos!

GO HERE AND SCROLL TO SEE ALL MY PICTURES: <https://imgur.com/a/INjKa>

here are some videos I took with my glock!:

I was going to use spoilers for all the pictures, but hf gave me a limit lol. same with the 2 videos.

I'm interested what type of rifles or pistols everyone has.

Not really interested in handguns, but I'd love a nice bolt action rifle.

Alright, my bad there, I am sorry.

Even though the "home protection" always sounds like an excuse to buy a gun to be honest.

If you really want to defend your house with it, I'd advise you to buy a normal handgun, considering that'd be way more effective to use if you were to have to use it in your home.

The best argument I've heard regarding firearms for personal defense is when you're driving on an empty highway in the middle of nowhere. That actually makes sense.

However, guns for home defense seems a bit ineffective. Installing security screens, secure locks and maybe even alarms or cameras if need be, is far more effective. Reason being, criminals will just rob you when you're away so they can't get shot. If you secure your home, the criminals will just rob your gun toting neighbour.

I actually disagree with stealth carry too. My problem there lies with escalation. Here in australia, drug addicts will rob you, but they never have a reason to be afraid of you because we can't carry guns. Mostly the only time they'll kill you is if they think their own life is in danger.

Shotguns can be much better for HD depending on where you live. If you live in a urban/suburban area bullets can easily penetrate walls and possibly injure innocent people, where as example birdshot won't penetrate as much, but I agree a handgun is much more maneuverable and easier to store.

The thing about carrying guns around is that people stay people and some people will shoot the moment they smell danger because they are simply retarded. You can see what happens in America, where people are free to carry guns in some states. Everyone is human. Humans get drunk and they can do things without thinking in a state of panic. If everyone here were to carry guns for their protection, I'd honestly not feel close to safe.

How we've got it here atm is fine in my opinion.

Guns are completely forbidden unless you have a license, and to get that license you need to undergo a lot of tests etc. and even then, you cannot carry it with you or even move it without locking it in a safe or something.

The only people you'll see here with guns are police officers, lets keep it that way.

When I am talking about restricting guns, I don't mean the sports.
Like I support people being free to practice gunshooting, if they have a license and are mentally capable of having a gun in posession.

I don't think anyone should be allowed (except for authorities) to walk around in public with a gun though, or having a gun at home.

You know how many lunatics there are, just one of them in a bad mood has a lot of potential damage if he can just buy a gun in one two three.

It actually makes it more likely you'll get shot. The only risk that decreases is the risk of losing your wallet.

You know how many lunatics there are, just one of them in a bad mood has a lot of potential damage if he can just buy a gun in one two three.
Doesn't make sense.

Regardless if guns are illegal or not, the bad guys/lunatics don't abide by laws, they get guns no matter what, legally or illegally.

If you take away guns, the only people with guns will be police and criminals. How does that work?

The amount of people with guns are really low here. Yes, you're right criminals can still get their hands on guns considering they won't abide the law anyway.

However, why would you make it easy for them? And also, if you allow people to just buy guns, it won't help against criminals. It might boost the amount of deadly victims by gunfire, though.

And to be honest, it sounds like a lot of people in America who have a nice collection of guns are just waiting for someone to break into their house so they can shoot them up. I know that if someone enters your house with a violent intent then you're right when you shoot them, however I wouldn't say it is necessary to shoot someone up to seize control and wait for authorities to arrive... There are plenty of ways, considering that you know the burglar has no arms on him, ofcourse.

It's just a fact, if you look at the numbers. America counts so many more gun-related incidents than any other country. And there is just but one logical explanation.

I understand that you might be responsible, but honestly, there are so many crazy people out there and if they can just buy a gun that easily, it won't make the situation any better. You might be feeling safer with a gun, but also consider that not everyone is willing to shoot up someone who has harm in mind.

The only thing I agree with is more strict background checks and mental examinations for anyone wanting to buy a gun.

If you have a violent criminal history (not just felony history) but if you have a history of domestic violence and such then you should not be allowed a weapon.

I do feel like that's where we should start.

But America is already filled with guns, no turning back on that. So more guns will be distributed for safety.

Mine:

Anderson Arms AM-15 .223

Sig Sauer P320 19x9mm

Winchester SXP 24" 20ga

Weatherby Vanguard 26" .308Win

I like the Glock choice. 26s are nice, really any Glock that shoots 9mm I'm a fan though, haha xD I use to carry a 19 Gen3, but made the switch to Sig and was happy I did. Don't be afraid to look at Springfield's XD-S and XD Mod.2 lines as well as Sig Sauer (P320 & P226 are my favorites). The frame will feel different, and for me better. All good handguns though. Thanks for a fun pea shooter thread! :)

You definitely blowing your spot up right now on the internet g.

You say you did time for attempted murder so you're marked with an F.

& if you're marked with an F you need to delete this post an clear up any images of you with pieces wtf? You just asking for a FPF..

The streets aint worth it in the long run I hope you know that. You could launder your shit, buy a couple smoke shops, laundromat or barber shop and clean money up but even then you gon' have pocket watchers left and right.

Even your homies gonna get greedy. Live by the gun die by the gun, the streets always win. I turned my shit around man, and pray to god everyday that I don't get any ATF visits from the past. Wish u well
