I'm extremely busy currently so Formula1 is in the process of helping Career run the group.
Formula is an extremely high quality member and I have complete faith in him being able to run the group in my absence.

mvmnt - February 2, 2017, 2:25 pm

Sweet I applied, was kicked previously for inactivity but I really like this group so hopefully I can get back in :)

I had a client who wanted to put gold vinyl wrap on a part of a cross! Changed his mind and did a black mat for him, the result was amazing. All my experiences with bikes are work I did for a bunch of clients, but looking forward to having my own.

250+ threads and 7000+ posts in under 2 months. I agree it's very inactive.

This is just to get some fresh faces in the group, not a mass recruitment. So far out of the 50+ requests we've only accepted 5 new members. :)

TheChi?f - February 3, 2017, 1:38 am

I'd like to thank Formula1 for letting me join!

Yes, this is a legitimate rule for this thread now.

However, I will allow the exception that someone here has a Prius with a hayabusa dropped in it.?

Any Group B or LM racers? Drags (NHRA) and NASCAR are all muscle, so you didn't expand from that. :/

That's not American, or at least not popular here so I couldn't tell you.

There's a pretty big different between a Camaro and a NHRA Dragster though lol.

There's also tuners, bikes, luxuries, and 4x4

I made the comparison with NHRA because you guys try to make everyone else think y'all are the "coolest and fastest guys in this forum". Jokes aside, still got Civics. :)

What kind of bikes? I wouldn't mind talking to some people who have a sport bike. Been looking into getting one recently.

And rally didn't really originate in America but it's still a popular race culture in Europe (basically everywhere but the US). WRC sucks ass and always has since regulations were put back into place.

When I say Custom I refer to the Custom Roadster I'm building.

When I say Bike I'm referencing the street bike I've sought out help in the group for choosing one.

When I say 4x4 I'm referring to the 2015 2500HD and 3500HD Duramax I've recently traded out of.

When I say oval track I'm referring to the sprintcars I used to race. These are sprintcars.

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=uHmivSvW2T4>]

That is just me, everyone else has there own story to tell.

I do not believe you will ever be a good fit for this group as you're arrogant in nature and probably just want to feel better about the fact that you don't have a honda civic? At least I hope not.

For the record there's nothing wrong with a civic if that's what you like.

Yes I did because I get annoyed by kids like you trying to put people down because they can only afford a civic/ricer or just like them.

You're always going to be below somebody else.

As are you. Same can be said for anyone and virtually everyone depending on the reasoning. I try to stay behind logic, though. I don't own a Civic but I wouldn't mind having one. I just wouldn't rice it out. I bet you could flip one pretty well seeing as how you're talking about one ton trucks and such.

I'm comfortable with my WR450. I'd like something more powerful, but being in a place where there's always traffic on every major street I figure it's best to not drive something too valuable, especially with all the no driving fucks right out of high school.

Lmk if you need advice on sport bikes.
