Does it last 30 days or can you get it for longer? Because if this is a free 30 day membership then you can just get that on amazon without your referral link.

sellertrust - February 4, 2017, 7:05 pm

Guys this is a affiliate link if you guys wondering. you can go amazon.com get free trial from there.

dnbest - February 4, 2017, 8:06 pm

Yeah I really don't get what you're trying to push here? You're actually offering a link to the most known trial out there O_o

It's a referral guys cmon he's just trying to get some bread online. The least you can do is not flame him for trying

Mahdisouri - February 5, 2017, 7:13 am

Anyone tried this method ?
it will work or not?

Do You Want To Bet - February 5, 2017, 4:33 pm

This is a referral that is why I posted it in the referral section...this is a link straight to amazon website.

Phire - February 6, 2017, 3:45 pm

I got a trial from Amazon.co.uk before and cancelled it so they don't charge me and then they created an account for me without my permission and attached my bank details on Amazon.com so I got charged £79.99.. I got it back though. To be honest though, this isn't getting it for free, this is just you informing us of a 30 day trial....

Yes but the title says "Get Amazon Prime Membership For FREE!!". This is just a trial to see if you like it or not whereas you make it look like you actually get Amazon Prime for free - like a proper version.

And yes, it is mine and many others opinion. Forgive me for not wanting a stickied thread in the Lounge (Which is already screaming for attention) to mislead everyone. He's not a big company. He paid $50 for a sticky trying to boost his Amazon account through an affiliate link.

This method is old and tired. Please move on.

Just so you know it, you are breaking amazons rules:

We may void your referral credits, terminate your eligibility to earn referral credits, or terminate your account, or the accounts of Amazon Prime members you refer, if you or they take any of the following actions:

"Refer customers using spam, display advertising, sponsored links, unsolicited emails, or links on message boards or forums;"

You probably dont care but whatever...

Lol first noticed now, you bought a sticky for this...

Why?

I mean, i get that you are using affiliate link, but is it really worth the sticky?

How much do you earn via their affiliate program?

mrnapolean1 - February 9, 2017, 9:04 am

Did the 30 day trial several months ago and its more like a three week (23 day) Trial.

On the fourth week (last seven days) Amazon will convert your Prime membership from a trial to a regular membership for 10.99 per month.

I had to get ahold of them and figure out why they charged my card for the membership during the trial period.

So just keep this in mind if you DO NOT want to be charged for Amazon prime, Cancel it 7 days before the expected trial end date. If you don't do this you take the chance of getting charged.

Well, thats generally how that shit works.. If it was really just a free 30 day trial, why the fuck would they want any information like cc, names etc from you? Well, basicly its because, they ciontinue your membership after the 30 days are over, but they continue it as a paid membership, so they automaticly start to charge you the next month after the 30days are over.. And conitnues your membership...

And tthey inform you that they do it, if you took the time to read everythuing with small or their agreement thingie you accept, it stated that you are doing 30 day promo trial, then to continue it as a paid membership. unless, you go in and manually deactivate your membership before the paid period kicks in..

Theres plenty of business that legally hustle people for so many millions $$ with this method.. Because people are fucking morons..

The concept they follow, is that they belive no people read the terms and agreements, which they dont.. Therefore their business keeps expanding..

Exact same strategy Apple and all other big tech shits use, when regarding to their return policy and their guarantees.. They state in their agreements that they dont have to give yopu new product if yours is derad/damagesd, but instead something called a refurbished one...
